Deficit at Half-Billion Despite New Deal Debt, Morgenthau Contends

He Claims Profits Will Offset Criticized Spending.

Reveals Ultimate Inflation Program

$2,800,000,000 Made on Gold Seizure to Be Used.

Table showing the financial aspects of the "New Deal" agencies will be found on Page 5.

By Franklin J. Walters, Jr.

Despite an increase of $6,000,000 in the National debt under the New Deal, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., in a National-wide radio broadcast last night argued that the actual deficit for the first 15 months of the Roosevelt regime would be only approximately $505,000,000.

Mr. Morgenthau arrived at this conclusion by pointing out that from the $8,000,000,000 increase in debt there should be subtracted an increase of $1,600,000,000 in the Treasury's cash balance; the so-called $2,800,000,000 gold "profit" and an increase of $1,095,000,000 in the assets of the emergency relief agencies.

In citing as an offset to the growing debt the "profit" of $2,800,000,000 which the Treasury obtained through devaluation of the gold dollar after seizing all the gold in the country, Mr. Morgenthau said that for the first time this sum would be kept "under lock and key."

Will Reduce Debt.

"But I call your attention to the fact," he added, "that ultimately we expect this 'profit' to flow back into the stream of our other revenues and thereby reduce the National debt."

From the passage of the gold devaluation act last January it was obvious that soon or late the Treasury would use the "profit" for reduction of the National debt after the necessity for the stabilization fund created out of the major part of it passed away. But this is the first time that such an intention was officially proclaimed.

When the Treasury issues and pays out gold certificates against this gold "profit" metal—the difference between the old statutory price of $20.67 an ounce and the new price of $35 an ounce for gold—it will constitute a currency inflation in the amount of $2,800,000,000. This aspect of the gold devaluation bill was the chief target of critics when the measure was pending before Congress.

Preparing for Financing.

The act specified that $2,000,000,000 of the "gold profit" should be used as a stabilization fund until January, 1936. Of that sum only $200,000,000 has been allocated to.

Virginia Police Slay 2 Bandits

Two Others Are Wanted After Safe Cracking at Dendron.

Dendron, Va., Aug. 28 (AP)—Ambushed by police and postal inspectors as they emerged from the Dendron postoffice after cracking the safe, two bandits were killed today and two others wounded.

The dead were E. W. Austin, who went down firing his pistol as he fell, and Johnny Bernard, who died in a Norfolk hospital.

Archie Austin, brother of E. W. Austin, was arrested this afternoon after he had been found seriously wounded near the scene of the attempted robbery. A passerby who found Austin, peppered with buckshot, carried him into town and notified the sheriff. He was taken to a Norfolk hospital.

John Crank, another of the quartet, suffered flesh wounds. Detective H. C. Gorton, Jr., of Norfolk, was shot in the wrist and abdomen during the affray.

Learning of the theft attempt, the police, headed by W. D. Kah, post-office inspector from the Norfolk postoffice and opened fire when the bandits tried to escape.

Spokane Transit Strike Fails to Halt Traffic

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 28 (AP)—Spokane's union street car and motor bus operators struck early today, but by midmorning nearly the normal number of buses and cars were operating, some manned by special drivers and others by men who declined to walk out.

The walkout was accomplished without violence, although the strikers massed near the car barns, jeering each nonstriking operator. The men are demanding a 10 per cent wage increase.

'Profit' Is Cited By Morgenthau

(Associated Press.) Here are some highlights in Secretary Morgenthau's speech last night.

"When this Administration came into office, the Treasury's cash balance amounted to about $200,000,000. By June 30, 1934, this cash balance had risen to nearly $1,900,000,000."

"But we have another cash drawer in the Treasury. . . . It is the very large sum of $2,800,000,000, representing 'profit' resulting from the change in the gold content of the dollar. . . . Ultimately we expect this 'profit' to flow back into the stream of our other revenues and thereby reduce the National debt."

"The gross increase in the National debt between March 4, 1933, and June 30, 1934, amounted in round numbers to $6,000,000,000. Against this . . . we can offset: (1) an increase in the Treasury's cash balance of $1,900,000,000; (2) the 'profit' of $2,800,000,000 resulting from the reduction of the gold content of the dollar; (3) the increase in the net assets of the agencies wholly owned and financed by the Government, amounting on June 30, 1934, to $1,095,000,000."

Johnson Gets $9,000 Raise As NRA Chief

Administrator's Salary Was Boosted by Roosevelt Before Policy Row.

(Associated Press.) The National Recovery Administration is considering vital changes in policy as a means of cutting deep slashes in the ranks of the unemployed this fall.

This became known yesterday at the same time as it was disclosed that Hugh S. Johnson, still firmly in control despite recent rows over reorganization, has had his salary increased from $8,000 to $15,000 a year.

President Roosevelt boosted the pay of his recovery administrator for the first time before the differences with Donald R. Richberg, NRA general counsel, and Secretary Perkins came near the breaking point. Johnson had complained many times he could not live on $8,000 and would have to return to private business.

Proposals Are Studied.

It is while Johnson is now on vacation that his aids are studying a wide variety of proposals to step up employment before winter sets in, throwing added relief burdens on the Federal and State governments.

One plan, which would involve a distinct departure from the previous emergency concepts of NRA, would remove production restrictions in codes and attempt to put hundreds of thousands of men to work through a new economy of stimulated production and consumption made possible by greater purchasing power.

Another would seek to open additional jobs through changes in hours and wages such as was done in the cotton garment code. This method of approach would be made easier under the realignment of all.

1 Hurt, Police Arrest 5 In Chicago Bus Strike

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP)—Bus windows were smashed, stench bombs hurled, one man was seriously injured and five others under arrest today as violence was renewed in the two week-old strike of Chicago bus drivers.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, on a visit to Chicago, denounced the attitude of the Chicago Motor Coach Co. as "intolerable." He charged that 25 workers have been discharged "for no other reason than that they exercised their right of choice of labor organizations."

Kidnaping Victim Freed at Camden

Father of New Yorker Put Up $10,000.

Camden, N. J., Aug. 28 (AP)—Ralph Sosia, 38, son of a New York necktie manufacturer, walked into Camden Police Headquarters tonight and told police he had been released by kidnappers here after his father paid a $10,000 ransom.

Sosia said he had been released from a house on the outskirts of Camden.

Camden police got in touch with New York authorities and stated they learned Sosia had been reported missing by his wife and that his father, Aaron Sosia, had paid the ransom money.

Strike Heads Won't Yield To Pressure

Gorman Says Peace Parley Must Grant Concessions.

Storm clouds obscured a peace conference due tomorrow in the brewing nationwide textile tie-up when unionists last night charged mill owners with picturing workers as plotting a strike against the Government.

The situation was further confused by reports that textile manufacturers had agreed to close their plants indefinitely as a counter move should the walkout materialize next Tuesday, the date tentatively fixed.

Francis J. Gorman, outspoken chairman of the strike committee, accepted an invitation to attend a mediation conference called for tomorrow by Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board. In a talk with reporters, however, he qualified his acceptance.

He explained he had been informed that George A. Sloan, chairman of the Cotton Textile Institute and the cotton textile code authority, was assembling a delegation to attend the Washington meeting. Gorman said he would insist that Sloan and his associates attend in their capacity as members of the institute rather than as members of the code authority. If Sloan and his aids spoke as members of the code authority, Gorman contended, failure to reach an agreement would place the union in the position of striking against the Government.

"We aren't going to meet with the code authority," he said. "We certainly aren't striking against the Government. Our strike is against industry and the management—not against the Government."

Employers to Be Heard From.

Labor Board officials said formal acceptance of the mediation offer had not been received from the employers. Indications were, however, that Sloan and his associates would be on hand in time for the meeting tomorrow. In another effort to assure success, the board invited W. D. Anderson, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, to attend with a group of Southern mill owners.

The executive council of the United Textile Workers will meet here tomorrow to decide whether to call a strike and whether to support the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, to attend with a group of Southern mill owners.

Gorman summarized the demands of the union as follows:

Hitler Picks Hess As His Successor

To Rule if Fuehrer Dies; 3,000 to Be Freed.

Berlin, Aug. 28 (AP)—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler intends to name Rudolf Hess, high Nazi leader, as his "deputy" in case of death or absence from duty, as provided under the present organization of the one-man administration, it was learned reliably tonight.

Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier, is to be named vice chancellor, it was understood. The appointments will be announced by Hitler in one of his speeches during the Nazi party convention, meeting in Nuremberg shortly, the informant said.

Hitler also plans to release 3,000 of 5,000 political prisoners remaining in concentration camps, and held elsewhere, it was revealed. The releases, under the recent amnesty decree, would chiefly affect Communists.

Mt. Hood Yields Body; Fumes Overcome Two

Portland, Ore., Aug. 28 (AP)—The body of Victor F. von Norrmann, Seattle, Wash., youth who plunged into the crater of Mount Hood yesterday, was recovered today.

The two men who braved death to recover the body became unconscious from the fumes and had to be revived by Portland Fire Department men stationed at the brink.

Ralph Capone Faces New Mixup Over Taxes

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP)—More tax troubles for Ralph Capone! McNeill Island Penitentiary, where he stoned for dodging Federal income taxes, Capone was named today in a suit by the State to collect $20,424 delinquent taxes and penalties, alleged to be overdue on personal property for 1932.

The 32-year-old scion of Britain's royal family and the 27-year-old Greek princess, known through Europe for her beauty, had shown liking for each other's company on the several occasions that Prince George visited London.

Fortescue 'Wedding' Joke, Says 'Pastor'

MISS HELENE FORTESCUE.

Take it from the man who performed the "ceremony," Miss Helene Fortescue, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Granville R. Fortescue, of Washington, did not marry John Marshall, Jr., of Washington, in spite of announcements to that effect.

"Sure, I performed the ceremony Saturday," said Frank H. Wells, referred to in the New York newspaper's announcement of the wedding as the "Rev." Mr. Wells. "However, in view of the fact that I am not a preacher but just a poor insurance man trying to get along in the world, I hardly think the wedding was legal."

Wells told the story to The Post by long distance telephone from his.

Senate Calls 100 in Inquiry On Armament

Nye Admits Zaharoff's Letters Found; DuPont Heads List.

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP)—A hundred officials of American companies engaged in the grim business of selling war supplies are under subpoena. It was disclosed today, to tell their secrets to the first American investigation of this trade.

They will be asked to tell what profits are made in explosives, armor plate, airplanes, poison gas and other implements of modern warfare and to relate what interest, if any, the American firms have in the so-called "international munitions ring," called abroad the "secret international."

Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Senate committee which will open hearings at Washington Tuesday, confirmed reports that the name of Sir Basil Zaharoff, called the "mystery man of Europe," would be heard as the committee delved into international angles of this study.

Nye would say only, however, that the committee's investigators hold some "interesting letters" between Sir Basil—a Greek-born multimillionaire—and American armament firms.

The list of 100 witnesses, who will furnish three weeks of testimony, includes, Nye said, makers of powder, small arms, war chemicals and war metals; airplane and ship builders; and the "many small jobbers" who fill the supply orders for minor wars and for revolutions.

Prince George to Wed Royal Grecian Beauty

British King Approves Marriage of Fourth Son to Marina; Betrothal Takes Place at Yugoslavian Summer Home.

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—A Balkan romance, its setting the picturesque Slovenian Alps of Yugoslavia, culminated tonight in the engagement of Prince George of England to the beautiful Princess Marina of Greece.

Like any other young lover, King George's fourth son asked first for the hand of the princess and then telegraphed home for his royal parents' consent. It was given gladly.

"It is with the greatest pleasure," the announcement from the palace said, "that the king and queen announce the betrothal of their dearly-beloved son, Prince George, to Princess Marina, daughter of Prince and Princess Nicholas of Greece, to which union the king has gladly given his consent."

An acquaintance that dated back five years to the young couple's first meeting in London ripened into love, London understood tonight, at the summer home of Prince Paul of Yugoslavia, where Prince George and Princess Marina are now visiting.

The 32-year-old scion of Britain's royal family and the 27-year-old Greek princess, known through Europe for her beauty, had shown liking for each other's company on the several occasions that Prince George visited London.

Then Prince George, on vacation, went to visit Prince Paul at Bled, Yugoslavia, Marina was there, too. Rumors immediately circulated over the Continent of their engagement, but London refused to believe, all the more so because an official denial was entered here over the week-end.

The court circular tonight, however, brought confirmation and the capital, recovering from its surprise, was soon discussing the royal romance with all signs of approval.

The tall, blue-eyed, handsome young English Prince and his fiancée have many tastes in common. Among them is love for music.

The prince is an accomplished pianist who plays classical and modern music with equal facility, while the princess has been schooled as an amateur musician.

The princess also likes dancing and shooting—two amusements of which Prince George as well is fond.

A thoroughly modern girl in every respect, the young Grecian princess likewise engages enthusiastically in outdoor sports, another trait calculated to endear her to England's sports-loving people.

A close friend of Prince George said tonight that he gave no indication of the engagement.

Sinclair Tops Creel, 3-1; Bilbo Trails Stephens; Blease Lags in Carolina

Senator Pulls Ahead of Former Executive by 3,000 Votes.

Run-Off Indicated In Early Returns

Collins in Third Place in Mississippi Race for Governor.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 28 (AP)—Senator Hubert D. Stephens, incumbent, tonight jumped out into a lead of more than 3,000 votes over former Gov. T. G. Bilbo in the Mississippi Democratic Senatorial primary of today with unofficial returns reported from a fourth of the State.

Representative Ross A. Collins was running third, about 5,000 votes behind Bilbo.

The count of 414 of the 1,811 precincts gave Bilbo 14,822, Collins 9,325, State Senator Frank Harper, 418, and Stephens, 18,081.

If this trend of the vote should continue, Senator Stephens and former Gov. Bilbo would enter a second, or run-off, primary on September 13 to decide the Junior Senatorship.

In earlier returns Stephens and Bilbo were running neck-and-neck. Heavy voting in Hinds, Holmes, and Leflore Counties began piling up a lead for Stephens.

Stephens based his plea for reelection on his support of President Roosevelt's policies in Congress. All the other candidates voiced support for Roosevelt, but brought in a host of other platform planks.

One Congressman, Will M. Whittington, of Greenwood, is unpopular for reelection.

Congressional candidates follow: First District—John Rankin, incumbent; W. C. Adams, Eugene P. Lacy.

Second District—Wall Dwyer, incumbent; Joe A. May.

Fourth District—Jeff Busby, incumbent; A. L. Ford, D. L. Gregory.

Fifth District—Thomas L. Bailey, incumbent; C. Dunn, W. L. Sprinks, Nate S. Williams, S. A. Witherspoon.

Collins, incumbent, seeking a Senate seat, did not make the race for reelection.

Sixth District—William M. Colmer, incumbent; Alexander Currie, John Lumpkin, Tarver McIntosh.

Seventh District—Russell Ellzey, incumbent; Jack M. Greaves, Dan R. McGehee, Hugh V. Wall.

2 Die, 284 Hurt By Tank Blasts

Loss Fixed at $5,500,000; Argentine Town Fired; Residents Flee.

Campana, Argentina, Aug. 28 (AP)—Twelve huge oil tanks exploded in deafening succession today, shaking Campana and its neighboring villages for 20 miles around. They spread flaming death and destruction over wide areas and caused damage estimated at $5,500,000.

Tonight 2 persons were dead, 2 were missing, 2 were gravely injured, 12 had suffered serious hurts, 70 had been treated at hospitals and 200 others had received treatment at homes and drug stores.

While firemen from Buenos Aires, 40 miles away, and other nearby cities battled to quell the flames leaping from veritable lakes of oil and gasoline spread over Campana, the adjoining Parana River and the nearby swamps, Marines aided police in efforts to evacuate residents.

Damage to the refining plant of the National Oil Co., subsidiary of Standard Oil, was estimated at $2,800,000, while damage to the town of Campana itself was expected to run higher.

Virtually every building suffered broken windows, cracked ceilings and walls or lost their roofs.

Inhabitants of Campana, as well as those in near-by towns, were terrified, rushing into the streets screaming, "The tanks; the tanks!"

A spectacular blaze from three square blocks of burning oil shot pillars of fire and smoke several hundred yards into the air, adding to the panic.

Cochran Sent Nominee Would Quit in His Favor

St. Louis, Aug. 28 (AP)—An offer to withdraw in favor of Representative John J. Cochran, defeated by Judge Harry S. Truman for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, was made today by Joseph A. Lennon, Democratic nominee for Congress in the Thirteenth district, in a letter directed to Chairman Joseph H. Bryan, of the Thirteenth District Congressional committee.

"I feel that there is an almost unanimous desire on the part of the Democratic voters of the Thirteenth district, concurred in by a host of Republican and independent voters, that Mr. Cochran be returned to Congress," Lennon said in the letter.

Yesterday's Vote In Three States

Early returns from primary elections yesterday in California, Mississippi and South Carolina showed:

California—Upton Sinclair was leading for the Democratic nomination for Governor with 166 precincts out of 10,730 complete. The vote: Sinclair, 10,247; George Creel, 3,702; Milton K. Young, 501. Frank F. Merriam was running in front for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Mississippi—Senator Hubert D. Stephens held an advantage of 3,000 votes over former Gov. Theodore K. Bilbo in the senatorial primary with a fourth of the precincts recorded.

South Carolina—Olin D. Johnston headed the field, including former Senator Cole L. Blease, in the race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, with only a fraction of the vote reported. This was one of the political comeback since his for the Senate several years ago.

Record Primary Ballot Indicated; 3,000,000 Voters Eligible.

Bleese Trails For Carolina's Governorship

Wets Lead Drys in Early Returns on Liquor Referendum.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 28 (AP)—Cole L. Blease, veteran campaigner, and a youthful opponent, Olin D. Johnston, of Spartanburg, stepped out in front of a field of eight seeking the nomination for Governor in an early unofficial return from today's Democratic primary.

With reports received from 97 of 1,474 precincts, the former Governor and United States Senator had 21,564 votes against 24,274 for Johnston, an attorney who was running as a Democrat.

Bleese, now a lieutenant governor, held four years ago and who was credited with getting the normal Bleese vote.

In third place was Wyndham M. Manning, son of South Carolina's war Governor, Richard I. Manning. His vote was 12,997.

For the other five, the tally stood: H. Kemper Cooke, Harry County Senator, 1,790; Dr. L. B. Owens, Mayor of Columbia, 1,584; Tom B. Pearce, Columbia business man, 8,386; James O. Sheppard, of Edgefield, now a lieutenant governor, 827; and C. E. Sloan, Greenville County Senator, 172.

Returns from 80 precincts showed wets leading the drys, 5,404 to 4,083 in the advisory referendum to ascertain if the voters want the present prohibition laws retained, or prefer a modification to permit legalizing of liquor.

Because of the Long tickets, the returns were slow in coming in. Polls closed at 4 p. m. in most precincts, but in the larger cities and some rural voting places they remained open until 6 p. m.

The balloting passed without disorder. A quiet day was reported from Charleston, where adherents of one political faction had appealed for the calling out of the National Guard troops.

Texas Women Fail In Flight Attempt

Land at Chicago After 106 Hours in Air.

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP)—A second attempt of two young Texas women to gain the women's endurance flight record ended today when their plane, the Lone Star, suddenly developed motor trouble.

Jean Lawrence and Mary Elizabeth Owens noted the craft to a safe landing at the Curtis-Reynolds Airport at 3:15 p. m. (Central standard time) after having been aloft for 108 hours and 2 minutes in their efforts to better the 340-hour record.

Both expressed keen disappointment, but were quick to assert they were going up again just as soon as the motor was repaired and they were rested—probably within a day or two.

Killer Prefers Life To 'Filt' in Louisiana

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 28 (AP)—Elmer R. Jackson, who recently confessed the double slaying of Charles Siefkin and his son during a holdup of Siefkin's oil station in Omaha 12 years ago, today said his confession was made because he "couldn't take it" at the Louisiana Prison Farm at Angola, La., where he was serving a five-year sentence for robbery.

Seated in the deputy warden's office at the Nebraska Penitentiary, Jackson related that brutality and filth in the prison farm caused him to barter the remainder of his sentence there for life imprisonment in Nebraska.

Record Primary Ballot Indicated; 3,000,000 Voters Eligible.

Merriam Ahead In G. O. P. Battle

Johnson Resting Senate Hope on Blessing of Administration.

San Francisco, Aug. 28 (AP)—Returns from 166 incomplete precincts out of 10,730 for Governor:

Democratic: Sinclair, 10,247; Creel, 3,702; Milton K. Young, 501.

Republican: Merriam, 8,449; Quinn, 1,322; Haight, 2,489; C. C. Young, 1,058.

San Francisco, Aug. 28 (AP)—An array of political philosophies, among them Upton Sinclair's "end poverty in California" plan, brought heavy voting today in the State primary election.

More than 3,000,000 persons were qualified to cast ballots and record balloting was in prospect in many places. The poll books showed 1,494,111 Democrats and 1,418,826 Republicans.

The gubernatorial campaign, enlivened by Sinclair's bid for the Democratic nomination on his extraordinary platform, drew most attention. The poll books showed the chairman of the author's campaign committee here, predicted Sinclair would win by 300,000.

George Creel, author and wartime director of public information, also sought the Democratic nomination for Governor on the stand that he would follow President Roosevelt's New Deal policies in California. His campaign organization was less confident than Sinclair's, but Fred Porter, spokesman for the Republican nomination for Governor—John R. Quinn, former Na-Donald C. Young, former chief executive, and Frank F. Merriam, Acting Governor since the death of James Rolph, Jr., made that race an exciting one.

Quinn waged his campaign on allegations of corruption in the building and loan company situation. Merriam pointed to his record of action in the recent San Francisco general strike and C. C. Young referred to his financial accomplishments while chief executive from 1926 to 1930. The campaign organization of each predicted victory.

Communist in Race.

Raymond L. Haight, of Los Angeles, former State corporation commissioner, regular Commonwealth party candidate for Governor, also sought the Republican and Democratic nominations. Sam Darcy, San Francisco, was the Communist candidate.

With the blessing of the National Administration, Senator Hiram W. Johnson, Republican, sought renomination not only in his own party but also the Democratic, Progressive and Commonwealth designations.

He was opposed, however, on the Republican ticket by Richmond A. Rust, of Los Angeles, and on the Democratic ballot by C. A. Henning and Carl A. Johnson.

The ballot was long with the names of candidates for National Representative and with nominations to be made for the State's 20 seats in the House. Among those seeking renomination was Clarence C. Lea, of Santa Rosa, Democrat, who has been mentioned as a possible choice for Speaker.

The list of State candidates numbered more than 700 and in Los Angeles County the addition of State and county designations brought the number to 1,800.

Boy, 11, Saved From Creek

Joseph Byrnes, Employee of Post, Dives Twice to Find Victim.

Plunging into the swirling rapids of Rock Creek at Pierce Mill Tea House late yesterday afternoon, Joseph Byrnes, 19, Washington Post copy boy, saved Walter Marshall, 11, colored, of the 3800 block of Danmon place northwest, from drowning.

Marshall, ventured beyond his depth, and was trapped by the ferocious waters which are about 6 feet deep near the tea house. He cried for help and sank. Rodas Garby, 11, of the 4100 block of Wisconsin avenue, heard his shouts and summoned Mr. Byrnes, who was several hundred feet away.

By the time Mr. Byrnes reached the spot and took off his clothes, Marshall had sunk for the second time. Wading through the water, Mr. Byrnes leaped into the whirlpool and dived twice before he found Marshall. He brought him to shore.

Members of the Fire Rescue Squad revived Marshall and took him to Emergency Hospital, where he was treated for shock.

Peace Prevails In Many Trades, Green Declares

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP).—The storms of industry may raise more racket, but beyond that, said President William Green of the American Federation of Labor today, many of the Nation's greatest unions are going along "untroubled by strikes and strife."

He lamented that spectacular strikes in certain situations had given a "distorted picture" of the general labor situation.

"Without deep inquiry," said Green to an interviewer, "I can think of three great industrial fields which have been untroubled—railway transportation, printing and pottery operatives." To the Federation leader, it is the labor groups that attract least attention which signify the inherent good health of the labor body.

"There are probably many other industries than the three named," he said, "in which workers and employers have lived in harmony."

Forest Fire Deaths In West Now Five

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 28 (AP).—The toll among men fighting Western forest fires was increased to five today with the death of John Everitt, supervisor of the Mount Shasta National Forest in California.

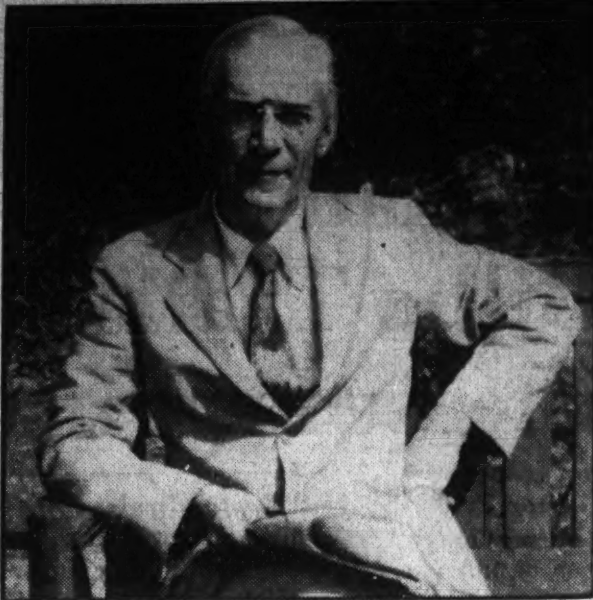

He was burned to death while scouting a fire which started from an electrical short circuit. He was trapped when the flames leaped a fire line. Previously two deaths had been reported among Idaho firefighters, one in Montana and one in California.

Town in California Threatened by Fire

Quincy, Calif., Aug. 28 (AP).—Fire which threatened the entire town of Quincy broke out in the main business district late today. All available fire-fighting equipment in Quincy and surrounding towns was rushed to the scene of the blaze.

The flames started in the old Grand Central Hotel block. The origin was not determined immediately.

California Storm Center

Upton Sinclair, Socialist writer, was the storm center of the California primary yesterday in which he was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Sinclair Plan to End Poverty Dominant Issue in California

Favors Bond Issue to Buy Idle Land, Factories to Employ Jobless.

San Francisco, Aug. 28 (AP).—The seizure of untenanted agricultural land and idle factories by condemnation proceedings and their operation by the unemployed under State supervision is contemplated in Upton Sinclair's scheme to "end poverty in California" within two years.

This was the outstanding issue upon which California Democrats voted today in the primary election. Sinclair, author and former Socialist, sought the Democratic nomination for Governor with the plan as a platform.

Under his plan the State would issue $330,000,000 in bonds to purchase land and factories by the right of eminent domain, and supplies and equipment. The bonds would range from $10 to $1,000.

A State money authority would handle the financing and would issue scrip to pay workers for their labor and products and for the transaction of business within the system.

The State 2½ per cent tax would be repealed and a State income tax would supplant it. Incomes under $5,000 yearly would be exempt, but the taxes would increase sharply in the higher brackets, being 30 per cent on $50,000. Inheritance, public utility and stock transfer taxes would be boosted sharply. Homes and farms worth less than $3,000 would be exempt from taxation.

Produce would be accepted for taxes where possible. All needy persons over 60 years of age and all individuals who are blind or physically unable to earn a living would receive a State pension of $50 a month. Widows with dependent children would receive a like sum, with added benefits if there were more than two children.

"I say positively," and without qualification, stated Sinclair in the little booklet which he wrote to explain his plan and sold to finance his campaign, "we can end poverty in California. I know exactly how to do it, and if you elect me Governor, with a Legislature to support me, I will put the job through—and I won't take more than one or two of my four years."

day by a lone robber and made to face the wall while the cash till was robbed of between $25 and $30. The criminal then fled. Paulette got into an automobile that was waiting with the engine running, with a confederate at the wheel. After a ride of about a mile Paulette put out.

Paulette walked back to the gas station and telephoned the police. Policemen Embrey and Brenner responded and later Policemen Charles Miller and Claude McDonald, but the two latter failed to reach the scene as their police car was hit by a truck of the Fairfax Farms Dairy Co. While the car was badly damaged, both policemen escaped injury.

The crash was at Washington and Queen streets, and in police court yesterday morning the driver of the truck, Aubrey H. James, 34, Ballston, Va., was fined $25 and $3 costs. Repairs to the police car will be adjusted by the dairy, it was stated.

White House Is Neutral on Speaker Race

Farley Says There'll Be No 'Meddling,' Silent on State Voting.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration, through its political strategist and patronage maestro, James A. Farley, yesterday unceremoniously washed its hands of any meddling in the House Speakership race.

"It's a free fight," the Postmaster General and chairman of the Democratic National Committee, told newsmen. He said he had no choice in the contest, and did not intend to make one.

Turning to the new right-wing movement in both parties, Mr. Farley echoed President Roosevelt's "faint damning" of the new-born American Liberty League, but he interviewed replete with more than the usual wisecracks and repartee.

"Kiss of Death."

"Mr. Roosevelt gave it the kiss of death," he remarked to reporters. "Aren't you going to join, general," gibed one newspaperman.

"I haven't been invited," laughed Farley.

He said President Roosevelt's carefully satiric comments coincided with his private opinion, but he denied emphatically he was responsible for queries sent out to five Democratic Senators who assailed the organization through the Democratic National committee.

The Postmaster General, who leaves Washington today for a short jaunt through Pennsylvania to dedicate two postoffices, maintained an impartial tone toward the California governorship race, despite close questioning by press men.

Lets Congratulations Wait.

"The polls won't close for three hours yet," he protested. "Anything I said might have some effect."

"Are you wiring congratulations to Upton Sinclair?" asked one reporter.

"I'll wait till he's nominated," said Mr. Farley.

He commented dispassionately on the other State primaries. Told that Upton Sinclair was running well up in the four-cornered Mississippi Senate race, he said:

"Well, I suppose there ought to be somebody in the Senate to offset Huey."

Postmaster General Farley's first statement that the Administration is not taking sides in the House Speakership contest set at rest for the time being reports of White House blessings on this or the other candidate.

Race Unchanged.

Yesterday brought no new hats in the Speakership ring, and the issue remained joined between House Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrnes, Representative William C. Clegg, Alabama; Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, and Representative John Rankin, of Mississippi.

Meantime, Representative Byrnes, the only one of the four on the Washington front, yesterday jumped into the controversy between Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican National Committee and Donald R. Richberg, of the President's Executive Council, over accuracy of the first Richberg report on New Deal accomplishments.

In a statement broadcast through the Democratic National committee, Mr. Byrnes, who is in charge of Congressional Democratic campaign forces, charged Chairman Fletcher lacked any statistics to disprove the plain figures of really phenomenal progress put forth by Mr. Richberg.

"Mr. Fletcher takes the position that the Roosevelt Administration can not claim any credit for aiding recovery prior to July of last year, when the AAA and NRA acts 'actually became effective,'" said Byrnes.

"He overlooks the fact that the former became effective in May and the latter on June 16 and furthermore that the country was alert to avail itself of the advantages of both for weeks in advance. He does, however, parenthetically mention 'the return of public confidence in April, 1933,' which is a considerable concession."

The Democratic floor leader said the Richberg 4,120,000 unemployment figure was "ultraconservative." He cited statistics of the National Conference Board in claiming that the gain employment in the 15 months from March to June of this year actually was 5,678,000.

Code Defiance Met Silently By Roosevelt

Cotton Makers' Refusal to Abide by Order Draws No Comment.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Hyde Park, Aug. 28.—Threatening developments within the cotton textile and garment industries, containing a menace to the New Deal program, were followed closely, but silently, by President Roosevelt today.

Rainbow for the first time since he established the "Summer White House" here, the President considered a host of questions—political as well as economic—with calmness and undoubtedly communicated by telephone with Washington on the latest flareups in the cotton trade.

But to all inquiries Mr. Roosevelt maintained a stoic attitude, confirming the impression—as far as the scheduled cotton textile strike is concerned—that he is leaving to machinery already created the settlement of what promises to be one of the most difficult of labor disputes.

So far no direct request for an appointment with the President has been made by either side. Even so, it was doubtful what action he could take before the issues are more closely drawn.

Makers Voice Defiance.

To this difficulty was added another today, in the form of a telegram from the Cotton Garment Code Authority informing him that this industry, consisting of 4,000 manufacturers in 42 States, flatly refused to abide by his recent order reducing hours and increasing wages.

Holding the changes unjustified, the industry served notice that it can neither "accept nor acquiesce" in his order, which is effective October 1. It marked the first instance of an industry defying a Presidential order under the recovery act, but brought no response from the "Summer White House."

Meanwhile, the President discussed New York social and political questions with Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, a guest for luncheon at the Roosevelt home with Mrs. Lehman. Through his secretary, Marvin H. McIntyre, the President insisted the visit was purely social and interviewers were not successful in reaching the Governor.

From Dr. Alfred J. Pearson, former American Ambassador to Poland, who returned recently from Europe, the President received first-hand impression of foreign developments. He reported that the economic condition of Germany is critical, that the forthcoming Saar plebiscite is loaded with "political dynamite," and that Russia is sidestepping its Communistic principles.

"I attribute the steady growth of business in that country in the last two years to the fact that Russia is becoming more like ourselves—a Democratic government," Dr. Pearson declared.

For more than an hour the professor, now an economist at the University, talked of Germany, Russia, France and Sweden with the President, seated in his tiny library office. Dr. Pearson gave highest praise to Sweden, which, he said, is in better condition than any country in Europe.

"I was keenly interested in studying Sweden's long-range economic planning that has been going on steadily for a quarter of a century," he remarked. "Sweden, you know, has had its own NRA long before we thought of one in our own country."

along Eleventh street to the park, police said.

Burton followed on his motorcycle over the curb and ducked as the man is said to have turned and pulled the trigger three times. One bullet smashed Coleman's goggles, one sang near Burton's nose, and the third failed to explode.

A crowd of spectators quickly grew to mob proportions, and angry men shouted to the policemen:

"Let us have him. We'll take care of him for you!"

Reserves protected Johnson from the surging crowd as the patrol wagon arrived.

Role of Country Gentleman Sits Jauntily on 'Pat' Hurley

Hoover's War Secretary Proud of Estate Down in Virginia, Suh!

By Bess Furman

(Associated Press Staff Writer). From a high law office window, Patrick J. Hurley yesterday looked down upon his former domain, the War Department, and remarked:

"In the words of Mark Twain, my political future is behind me."

Then he looked across to the hill-tops where his Leesburg (Va.) home lay, haze-enveloped, and smiled his satisfaction. For Hurley, having bought Belmont, an historic show place of 1,200 acres with a long record of failure, has been actually making it pay—the depression notwithstanding.

The role of Virginia gentleman-farmer sat jauntily upon the lean, handsome, Oklahoman, who has been boy miner, cowboy, World War hero and was the Hoover Secretary of War. To the perfection of his pepper-and-salt gray suit he had added that final touch—a long black ribbon dangling from the eye glasses. But his soft felt hat, tossed to a nearby settee, still had a Southwestern slant. And so did his speech.

He told the delights of country living at Belmont, built in 1796 by Ludwell Lee, son of a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Same family, of course, as Robert E. Lee, of later fame. Not a propitious spot, politically, for a republic. But for an Irish Hurley—fine! Wasn't his father a Van Zandt County Federalist, down in Texas?

"And when Texas seceded from the Union, Van Zandt County seceded from Texas!" said Pat Hurley proudly.

"I think the idea of restoring prosperity through destruction is absurd!" exclaimed Hurley, who raises thoroughbred horses just because he likes them; crops of all kinds, poultry, and hogs for home consumption, and white-faced cattle with the grim determination to show he can make them pay, besides providing his milk, cream and butter.

Hurley talked longest about the horses. His strikingly beautiful blonde wife rides in the fox hunts; his four children, Patricia, 14; Ruth, 12; Wilson, 10, and even Mary, 4, the "Cabinet Baby" of the Hoover Administration, spends hours in the saddle daily; bring home their share of the children's trophies at the county fair.

"I get home in time to ride almost every evening," said Pat.

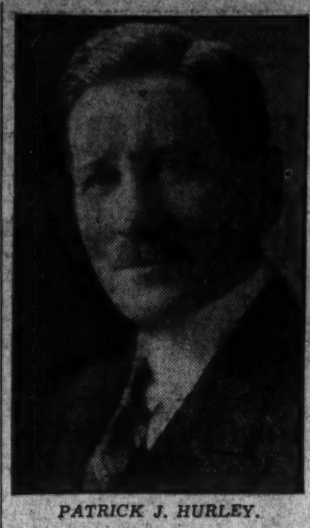

"Other avocations?" Well, I've just finished reading again the five volumes of Washington Irving's "Life of Washington. I find it wholesome—untarnished by the modernists."

"In our old College Library at Muskogee, Indian Territory, was a set of Fiske's History of the United States, greatest ever written. I'm reading Fiske again, too. His four volumes of Cosmic Philosophy are another wholesome influence in this generation of economists."

Prison Trains Guns on 3,000 Rebel Convicts

Pennsylvania Police Told to Shoot at First Sign of Outbreak.

Philadelphia, Aug. 28 (AP).—Sullen, silent revolt placed the Eastern State Penitentiary on an emergency basis tonight.

Orders to be prepared for any possible development applied alike to Cherry Hill, century-old fort-like Philadelphia prison, where 1,300 to 1,400 prisoners went on a hunger and work strike, closing down all industrial shops today, and to the new Graterford Farm, 35 miles away, where stampeding felons caused $40,000 worth of havoc Saturday.

"Inside a penitentiary, as in the world outside, questions are sometimes settled by a minority instead of by a majority," said Dr. Guy T. Holcombe, president of the penitentiary board of trustees. "That is the situation here today."

Machine Guns Set Up.

In contrast to the bedlam of Saturday's uprising, comparative silence prevailed, accentuating the tenseness. A guard described Graterford as "too quiet." All but 200 to 300 of the population have refused to work or to eat.

Two machine guns, manned by experts of the State police, were mounted on the power house inside the wall of the suburban prison. Instructions to the gunners are to "let them have it" if an outbreak is attempted, said Capt. Elmer Leitheiser, deputy warden in charge of the 1,600 prisoners there.

"Each individual in his cell was told what would happen to him if he made any attempt to break out of his cell."

"The instructions to State police are to let them have it if they do come out. . . . We have taken all precautions possible, but the situation is still tense."

Intimidation Charged.

Industry ceased at Cherry Hill when a convict in one of the shops dropped his tools and yelled "everybody out." He was followed from the shop by 300 workers who filed in orderly fashion to their cells. The strike spread within two hours to the entire population. Officials said most of the men wanted to work, but a wave of intimidation prevented them. The kitchen was not affected.

Oppose Sentence Law.

Warden Herbert Smith said the strike was "in sympathy with the movement started at Graterford for a law reducing sentences."

He announced the prisoners will be kept and fed in their cells "until such time as it is deemed advisable to continue with the regular routine of the prison." The board of trustees gave him virtually unlimited powers of administration to assure order.

The hunger and work strikes at Graterford grew out of resentment over the arraignment of 15 convicts held responsible for Saturday's riot, officials said. Newspaper deliveries and use of radios were halted.

Capt. Leitheiser said today that the basis of the outbreaks is opposition to the Ludlow law under which Pennsylvania convicts are sentenced. The law provides for a minimum and a maximum sentence, the latter to be twice the length of the former. In the event of a five-to-ten-year sentence, a prisoner is eligible for parole after five years. He is at liberty then for the other five years. If he breaks the parole at any time, he must return and serve out the full ten-year term. The prisoners contend they should only serve the period of the sentence remaining when the parole is violated, Capt. Leitheiser said.

Under the law the sentence cannot be reduced except by the State pardon board.

codes into 22 groups, which was announced yesterday.

Meeting Is Near.

With the fall season almost here, it was believed some plan might be ready for presentation to President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y., when Johnson confers with the Chief Executive on the reorganization program. This meeting is less than two weeks away.

Obviously, one of the Administration's major problems next winter will be that of relief, and the President's advisers are searching for every means to put as many men as possible back to work to lighten that load.

With Mr. Roosevelt's new expression of confidence in Johnson, there appeared no doubt that the latter would have a major voice in shaping the new policies, which are to be perfected not only to increase the number of jobs, but also to form the basis for permanent legislation.

Johnson probably will be named chairman of the board which is expected to be set up to run NRA until Congress enacts new legislation. His increase in salary will remove any objection as to the cost of living here and allow him to stay on indefinitely.

At NRA yesterday it was said the salary boost to $15,000 was made in order to give the administrator a pay more nearly in line with his worth. Johnson himself set the $6,000 figure when he became administrator more than a year ago. The new salary places Johnson on a plane with Cabinet officers and makes him one of the highest paid officials in the Government. Actually, Johnson will receive $14,250, the Government's 5 per cent pay cut paring it down that much.

Seized in Extortion Plot.

Denver, Aug. 28 (AP).—A charge of sending a threatening letter through the mails was filed today against Freeman H. Talbot, 50, former manager of a radio station here, in connection with an extortion plot against a friend, John T. Gattall, Denver businessman.

Army Cook Marvels at Appetites of Boys, Guests of D. C. Police at Outing Camp

Between afternoon swim and dinner—checkers in the supervisor's office at Camp Calvert near Leonardtown, Md., where 150 Southwest Washington boys, members of the Fifth Precinct Police Boys' Club, are vacationing for a week. Watching the play at the extreme right is Morris Fox, assistant camp supervisor.

Petro Youths Annex Calvert Title With Heavy Eating.

If business isn't so good next week with Joe Petro, 323 Ninth street southeast, the reason probably will be his sons, Joe, Jr., Jim, Dan and Charles.

Joe Petro is a huckster. Of the 150 boys the Washington Police Department has taken for a week, camping at Camp Calvert some 50 miles down the Potomac, his happen to be the champion eaters. And all indications yesterday pointed to their bringing the title home with them when camp is broken Saturday.

As a matter of fact, the Petro boys are eating champions by only a shade, by the thickness of a graham cracker, so to speak. The rest of the boys are pretty good eaters, potential champs. But the Petros mean to hang on to the title if they have to top off a meal of beans, meat, spaghetti, &c., with a couple of bananas.

Capacity Worries Papa.

Assuming that a boy's capacity for food increases in direct ratio to his growth, Papa Petro has a long time to worry about business profits. His oldest is Joe, Jr., 15, his youngest, Charles, 9.

The Petros won a reputation as eaters very early in the game, before they reached camp, in fact while they were being driven down there Saturday. Papa Petro had given his sons a dozen bananas to keep them from getting hungry. They ate them all, and weren't until dinner time. That was when Joe took a lead with four plates of spaghetti consumed by Dan at a later meal, and the best gastronomic performances of the rest of the camp have yet to exceed. By actual count of jealous pretenders, Joe put away two plates of beans, ten pieces of bread and jelly, four glasses of lemonade, ten hot dogs and another banana.

A leading contender for the Petro's eating championship is John Hardesty, of 311 Fourth street southeast, whose best meal was three helpings of peas, two of meat—big ones—one of potatoes and 12 slices of bread washed down with a glass of water. But John's chances for the title are considered pretty slim. He's only 8 years old and has already gained 6 pounds.

Cook Marvels at Eaters. The hardest working man in camp is Howard Schwimmer, Battery A, Sixteenth Field Artillery, Fort Myer. He's the cook. He's cooked for the Army for quite a while, and he's never seen anything like the per capita consumption of the boys at Camp Calvert.

"The boys eat more than soldiers. But I don't mind. It kinda flatters me. Besides they don't growl about the food the way they do in the Army."

But Mess Sergt. Howard Cundiff, of Headquarters Battery, Sixteenth Field Artillery, is the man to see for statistics on Camp Calvert eating. As nearly as he can figure it costs 12 cents more per capita per day to feed a Southwest Washington boy than it does to feed a Fort Myer artilleryman.

The boys eat, in a day, according to Sergt. Cundiff: Twenty-seven gallons of milk, 60 pounds of potatoes, 50 pounds of fruit, 100 pounds of meat, 15 pounds of butter, 25 pounds of sugar, 40 gallons of beverage, 60 loaves of bread and 40 boxes of breakfast cereal.

Eating, like everything else at Camp Calvert is worked out on schedule. There is a time for swimming, a time for games—boxing, wrestling, tennis, horseshoes. The time for getting up is 6 a. m. Everyone's in bed and the lights in

Industry Wrote Its Own Codes, Says Richberg

Denies President Dictated Pact to Youthful "Brain Trust."

The charge that NRA codes were written "by a mysterious group of youthful 'brain trusters' operating under a Presidential dictatorship is an absurd myth," Donald R. Richberg, executive director of the National Emergency Council, said in a speech last night.

"The truth is," he added, "that these codes were written by hard-headed business men who were the chosen representatives of trade and industry."

Richberg, who made public his first report on economic progress under the New Deal Monday, revealed that his second report will be filed today. It will deal chiefly with agricultural relief.

He said his information showed that "we have made a better record of recovery in 18 months than our Nation ever made in any previous comparable depression."

Richberg denied that NRA had impinged on the Constitutional rights of any one, and cited the fact that Federal courts in 17 States had upheld the recovery act.

"To argue that such a process of self-government is invalid under a Constitution designed to establish and perpetuate government by the consent of the governed," he said, "is to contend that the American people have denied themselves the power to control the processes of industrial production and distribution."

Grocery Robbers Get $50 in Daring Raid

Two colored men, one armed with a revolver, yesterday held up Sam Chalkia, proprietor of a grocery store at 1801 Vermont avenue northwest, and robbed him of $50, police were told.

Chalkia said the men entered and made a small purchase. One of them, he declared, then drew a gun and demanded money. They rifled a cash register and fled.

home at Mount Vernon, N. Y., yesterday.

"I know Miss Fortescue and Mr. Marshall," he said. "I was swimming at Carmel, N. Y., where Miss Fortescue is leading lady at the Rockbridge Theater. She and Marshall came to me on the beach and told me they wanted me to act the part of a preacher in a mock wedding. They told me to be as serious as possible."

"I consented, but I told them I would have to wear a light summer suit because that was the only kind of suit I had with me. The ceremony took place on the stage of the theater. There were ushers, bridesmaids and a best man, a complete wedding party. There were a number of people in the audience, including the theater cast and friends of the bride and bridegroom."

"I was handed a book and I read a ceremony that I had never seen before. I guess some of the people present did think it was a real wedding. But I didn't think it would be taken so seriously."

"After the wedding, Miss Fortescue, Mr. Marshall, Mrs. Wells and myself went to a roadhouse and had a lot of beer. We told the bartender about it and he thought it was so funny that he bought us a drink."

The announcement in New York even stated that the "newlyweds" would sail for Europe September 8. Steamship companies are being told that no reservations will be made for that date or any other.

Both Mrs. John Marshall, sr., and Mrs. Fortescue denied that the couple had been married.

New Deal Cost Told on Radio By Morgenthau

Complete Text of Speech Gives Data on Position of U. S. Treasury.

The complete text of Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Morgenthau's speech on "The Treasury's Finances" over the radio last night was as follows:

I propose tonight to discuss with you the cost of the New Deal. I will avoid the jargon of the usual financial statement and will try to give you in plain language a concise but complete explanation of the essential facts.

March 4, 1933, when the present Administration came into office, the gross public debt of the United States stood at a little less than $21,000,000,000. By June 30 of this year it had increased to $27,000,000,000, or an increase of about $6,000,000,000. This is the gross increase in the National debt during the first year and four months of the new Administration.

Some observers have concluded that it also represents the cost of the New Deal during that period, in so far as such cost is reflected in a growth of the public debt. This assumption is easily made, but it ignores the all-important fact that, while we have increased our debt, we have also increased our assets, many of them in realizable form. By this I mean assets which in due time the Government will turn into cash, thereby making them available for reduction of the National debt.

A good business man takes a periodic inventory of the stock of goods on his shelves, to see if his inventory has increased or decreased. Let us do the same tonight. Let us take an inventory of the Government's assets and see how those assets have changed since March 4 of last year.

Treasury's Cash Position.

We begin with the Treasury's cash balance. This is the Government's equivalent of cash in the merchant's drawer. If a merchant should find that, at the end of 16 months his gross debt had increased by $1,000, but that he had $350 more in his cash register, he would, of course, take into account the increase in his cash when figuring the change in his financial condition. We can follow the same practice in measuring the real financial position of the Government. These are the facts:

On March 4 of last year, when this Administration came into office, the Treasury's cash balance amounted to about $200,000,000. By June 30, 1934, this cash balance had risen to nearly $1,900,000,000—an increase of about $1,700,000,000. If this gain in cash is deducted from the gross increase in the public debt, the net increase becomes $4,400,000,000, instead of $6,000,000,000.

But we have another cash drawer in the Treasury, in addition to the drawer which carries our working balance. This second drawer I will call the "gold" drawer. In it is the very large sum of $2,800,000,000, representing "profit" resulting from the change in the gold content of the dollar. Practically all of this "profit" the Treasury holds in the form of gold and silver. The rest is in other assets.

Under Lock and Key.

I do not propose here to subtract this $2,800,000,000 from the net increase of $4,400,000,000 in the National debt—thereby reducing the figure to $1,600,000,000. And the reason why I do not subtract it is this: For the present this $2,800,000,000 is under lock and key. Most of it, by authority of Congress, is segregated in the so-called stabilization fund, and for the present we propose to keep it there. But I call your attention to the fact that ultimately we expect this "profit" to flow back into the stream of our other revenues and thereby reduce the National debt.

We have, then, in effect, two cash drawers in the Treasury—one containing our working balance, which is $1,900,000,000 larger than on March 4 of last year, and the other containing $2,800,000,000, representing the "profit" on devaluation. But in addition to cash drawers, we also have a safe. And in that safe we have some very valuable securities—securities consisting of notes and other obligations held by various agencies in which the Government has an interest.

A complete statement of the net assets of this kind has never before been published by the Government. I am giving out such a statement this evening for publication in tomorrow morning's newspapers. From now on I will do this regularly once a month. I am doing so in order that you can always have access to an accurate, full and up-to-date account of the financial position of our Government.

Assets in Two Groups.

The assets I am now describing may be classified in two groups. The first group consists of assets of agencies which are wholly owned by the Government and wholly financed with Government funds. In this group belong the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Public Works Administration, the Export-Import Bank and a number of other agencies financed entirely by the Government. Between March 4 of last year and June 30 of this year, the net increase in the assets of these agencies amounted to $1,095,000,000.

What are these assets, and can we rely on them to contribute in due time to reduction of the National debt? They consist for the most part of such items as preferred bank stock and capital notes, cash, investments and other property and loans made to public and private borrowers.

In the Treasury we recognize, of course, that it may later be necessary to write off certain losses. But the quality of the collateral which secures the various loans; the good credit of our State and local governments; the record of private business in meeting its obligations, all combine to give assurance that the losses of the National Government will not be substantial. So much for the first group of

New Deal's Assets and Liabilities Counted by Treasury

In an effort to give a clearer picture of the financial aspects of the "New Deal" agencies, the Treasury last night made public the following combined statement of assets and liabilities of Governmental corporations and credit agencies as of June 30, last, simultaneously with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's radio speech explaining the tabulation.

Housing Head Attacks Critics Of 9% Interest

Moffett Backs 1926 Level for Business, Urges Reasonable Profit.

A lively defense of 9 1/2 per cent interest rates set in the Administration's new housing program, and a vigorous endorsement of 1926 levels for both building materials and wages, were made yesterday by Federal Housing Administrator James A. Moffett.

At the same time, he favored increased freight rates sought by the railroads, despite protests by some lumber interests that the boost might offset increased lumber sales. "I know of no prohibition on anybody doing business at a reasonable profit," he said. "Of course, we wouldn't want to see charges run away. But if you are going to work toward a 1926 wage scale, you have got to charge prices that will support it."

Capital Must Have Profit.
"This whole job is being done with private capital. They have got to operate at a reasonable profit, and that goes for builders, the banks and the railroads."

Despite criticism of rates charged for house modernization loans, Administrator Moffett insisted they are approximately half any rates ever offered before for this type of loan.

To reported statements by Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, unfavorably contrasting rates for house construction loans in this country with the 4 per cent he said was charged in Great Britain, Mr. Moffett replied that Mr. Hopkins must have been misquoted. "The two can't be compared," he said. "Our job is being done with the public's money, and loans are made without collateral. The best rates you could get on character loans of this type before our plan was drawn was 17 per cent."

4,268 Banks Join.
Mr. Moffett disclosed that 4,268 banks have come into the plan, and others are signing up at the rate of 200 a day, making approximately $27,000,000 in resources available for the housing program.

"Notwithstanding statements that this thing is not going over, I think it is very well," he said, adding that a number of strong business organizations are supporting it.

He said average building materials now are selling at 90 per cent of the 1926 level.

"They ought to reflect that level to protect the wage scale," he asserted.

Snydam Named Aid to Cummings

Correspondent Gets Post of Special Assistant.

Appointment of Henry Snydam, newspaperman, as a special assistant to Attorney General Cummings was announced yesterday at the Department of Justice.

The announcement explained he was named "in pursuance of the policy of the Attorney General to inform the public of the problems and work of the department."

Mr. Snydam has been Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle since 1922.

Col. Robert M. Gates, another former correspondent, will remain as press relations officer, department officials said.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 28 (AP).—With 37 new cases reported during the past week, the State department of public health today announced a "pronounced upward trend in the prevalence" of epidemic sleeping sickness.

Since August 1, public health officials have received reports of 23 cases.

300 Pickets Raid FERA Projects

Workmen Attacked by Auto Squadron.

Milwaukee, Aug. 28 (AP).—Strike pickets today resorted to pummeling work site foremen in their attempts to paralyze the 200 FERA projects in the county, assaulting three foremen and one laborer as they struck swiftly at scattered points.

Traveling in automobiles, more than 300 pickets led police on something of a will-o'-the-wisp chase as they coaxed laborers to lay down their shovels. Victory was claimed by each side.

Police reported all projects which the firing squad visited, except one on Jones island, were reopened after the pickets departed or police protection arrived. Officials of the Workers' Committee on Unemployment, sponsoring the strike, claimed shutdown of seven projects.

Argentinians Visit Annapolis

48 Midshipmen Inspect Departments at U. S. Naval Academy.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 28 (Sp.).—Forty-eight midshipmen of the Argentine navy are overnight guests at the Naval Academy tonight after completing an inspection of all departments of the institution.

They took their meals with American midshipmen, and "bunked" in Bancroft Hall, dormitory building.

The Argentinians, members of the class to be graduated from the Argentine Naval Academy December 4, are from the training ship Presidente Sarmiento, which has visited the United States on several occasions in recent years and is now at New York.

Feted in Washington yesterday, the midshipmen made the trip to Annapolis by motor bus and were accompanied by four Argentine officers of junior rank. They were unable to glimpse the full swing of activities at Uncle Sam's naval school, as midshipmen of the upper three classes now are on leave. However, they observed the new fourth classmen in routine drills and later in the afternoon exhibited keen interest in football practice in which a big squad of freshmen engaged.

Officers in the visiting party were Lieut. Comdr. Aurelio Lera, and Lieuts. Adolfo Piva, Paul E. Sidders, and Manuel Fontal. Their local escort consisted of several young American officers and a group of Spanish-speaking midshipmen. The visitors will return to Washington tomorrow, then to New York.

Tobacco by the Warehouse—full

100% TOP-GRADE!

BUYERS of advertising space can learn something from buyers of tobacco.

If you buy tobacco at wholesale you've got to buy quantity—for 285 million cigarettes are smoked in the U.S. every day. But you've got to buy quality too—if it's for one of the big-selling brands today. Only fine bright leaf. Only rich and mellow burley.

Lots of tobacco isn't enough. It's got to be lots of fine tobacco.

When you buy advertising for your business are you as shrewd as these veterans who buy tobacco for their business? You are in the market for quantity, just as they are. But do you insist on the cream of the crop when you're out buying prospects? Do you demand quality when you examine circulation figures?

Cut out the waste in your advertising costs. Put your advertising under the eyes of those people who are able to buy . . . hundreds of thousands of people who are able to buy. Every day an alert group of national advertisers and local New York business men sell more of their merchandise more easily and in larger volume because they tell their story to the 323,375 above-average-income families who read the New York Herald Tribune. (On Sundays it is 442,039.) These advertisers have found that to get mass you do not have to forego buying power; that to get buying power you do not have to forego mass.

In the New York Herald Tribune you get them both.

The facts about how to increase your business in the greatest market of them all are at your service without obligation. Just a letter or a 'phone call . . .

The Cost of Delay.

It would be futile to speculate as to the social cost resulting from the delay in approval of a site for the District's proposed tuberculosis hospital. But realization that even a few victims might have been saved is sufficient to emphasize the misfortune of the PWA's useless controversy with the District Commissioners over selection of a hospital site.

Ever since the District appropriation act was passed, money for preparation of the plans and specifications has been available. But that work is only now beginning. Architects can not plan a hospital, of course, until they know where it is to be located. It is gratifying to note Engineer Commissioner Sultan's efforts to hasten this work. But six months may be required to prepare for the letting of a contract. Actual construction of the building probably will require at least a year more.

Four years ago the District was looking forward to the construction of the Children's Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Glenn Dale. Actual construction of that building began in the summer of 1932 and was completed about a year ago. Still it is not open to victims of the plague. Difficulty in securing adequate water has caused the most recent delay. The first well drilled for this purpose was a disappointment, and it was necessary to develop another before an adequate flow could be secured. In the meantime many of Washington's child victims of tuberculosis have been denied proper treatment.

It is of vital importance to avoid similar mistakes and further unnecessary delay in construction of the adult hospital. The District's tuberculosis problem demands action. Already there has been far too much time wasted.

A Man Of Mystery.

It is not surprising that the shadowy form of Sir Basil Zaharoff has been reported lurking in the background by the Senate's investigation of the munitions trade. Nor will it be surprising if other powerful names are publicized before the committee ends its inquiries.

Sir Basil is a man of mystery, but not as much so as was the case before the publication of the article in "Fortune," which had much to do with launching the present investigation. In that article the mysterious Zaharoff is called "the greatest armament salesman the world has ever known." His personal fortune, built up out of munitions, has been estimated conservatively at least $100,000,000. And the basis of much of it, again according to "Fortune," came from his association with an American.

It is through his dealings with Hiram Maxim, "whose new machine gun was incomparably the best killing machine that Zaharoff had ever seen," that this super-salesman is said to have become associated with what is now the huge Vickers-Armstrong organization, one of the most powerful manufacturers of the means of wholesale death. Sir Basil is now "withered and senile," according to the "Fortune" writer, but since the days of Balkan dog fights he has done a lot of prompting from the shadowy wings of the international stage.

So it is little wonder that Zaharoff's name has cropped up early in the Senate inquiry, or that its emergence in connection with American manufacturers is regarded as news. The committee, which has been working all summer, has as yet revealed nothing definite of what it has learned. For this it is to be congratulated. The subject of the investigations is serious enough, and the field unfamiliar to public knowledge extensive enough, to make it good policy to play down the sensationalism with which the subject easily could be exploited.

Mess Of Pottage.

William A. Schnader, Attorney General for Pennsylvania, used the American Bar Association convention as a sounding board for a denunciation of Federal encroachment upon the rights of the States. With elaborate quotations from Jefferson, Lincoln and Wilson, he pointed out the danger of local governments being swallowed up by oppressive bureaucracies in Washington. "I am convinced that the time has come," he said, "when the States must fight for their rights."

The subject is timely, and the problem of far-reaching importance. But is the Attorney General of Pennsylvania in any position to lead a movement against Federal encroachments upon State sovereignty? Officials of that State have engaged in begging expeditions to Washington with a regularity and insistence which would be hard to match. Even now they are engaged in a controversy with the FERA over relief funds. The most far-reaching encroachments upon Pennsylvania's rights and responsibilities have come in response to urgent pleas from her Governor.

The spectacle of the Federal Government collecting taxes and paying them over to the States as bounties and gratuities for purposes which are distinctly functions of State government is, as Mr. Schnader says, truly anomalous. It tends to make a farce of local government. But Federal officials are not primarily responsible for this policy. The States send their representatives to Washington to secure Federal aid on the foolish assumption that it doesn't cost them anything. The supposed benefits obtained in exchange for States' rights are certainly a "mess of pottage." But it is pottage that the States themselves have concocted.

The Freight-Rate Petition.

By petitioning the Interstate Commerce Commission for an increase in freight rates the railroads are trying to escape a desperate situation. As their petition states, "it is a matter of common knowledge that the carriers are in dire need of additional revenue." Net operating income for Class 1 roads in 1934 is estimated at $463,000,000, compared with fixed charges against them alone amounting to $516,000,000.

Railway operating costs have substantially increased. Wages have been adjusted upward. The price of materials has advanced. New pensions have been added to those already existing. The carriers estimate that their operating expenses have been augmented by $293,000,000 per year. At the same time railway earnings have been seriously curtailed by the drought and by the persistent slump in the capital goods industries. None can effectively deny the urgent need of the carriers for revenue to meet their current obligations and to go forward with long delayed maintenance work.

The efficacy of higher freight rates as a remedy for this situation, however, is subject to question. The railroads are suffering primarily from slack business and costs which they are unable to curtail. No doubt the higher rates would bring them more revenue than existing tariffs, at least temporarily. But at the same time they would play directly into the hands of competitors who have already made extensive inroads upon railway transportation.

Of course, the carriers are aware of this risk. In estimating that the proposed new rates would increase their revenue by $170,000,000 an allowance was made for traffic that may be diverted to competing agencies. No doubt the carriers feel that their need is so acute as to supersede potential losses of this kind. In periods of emergency there is always a tendency to minimize long-term considerations. But the Interstate Commerce Commission is charged with the responsibility of weighing the problem from all angles, even though it can scarcely deny at least a portion of the relief which is asked.

The effect of the railroads' petition, therefore, is to emphasize the urgency of a more fundamental solution than that which they suggest. This, obviously, is to be found in two directions. In the first place, real emphasis—not merely lip service—must be given to the basic problem of reviving activities in the capital goods industries, which would quickly reflect itself in increased railway earnings. Without such revival increased freight rates may only make a bad situation worse.

In the second place, the Railway Coordinator should make known, as soon as possible, whether he has found that the labor provisions of the act creating his office make coordination futile as a means of securing essential economies. If that is the case, as is now being alleged, it would seem that the much-heralded effort to secure a National transportation policy is bogged, and that through no fault of the carriers.

The public significance of the railroads' present request, following so soon after their attempt to secure an injunction against the new pension system, lies in its revelation of their desperate situation. As Raymond Moley says over his signature in the current issue of "Today": "The Government has too much at stake in the well-being of the railroads to permit the situation to drift." Yet that is exactly what is happening.

"Run Away Employers."

"Run away employers" are becoming a source of increasing annoyance to the NRA. In at least three instances controversies have arisen recently over the migration of factories from New York because of high labor costs in that city. A Brooklyn furniture factory moved to Jersey City for the alleged purpose of breaking its contract with a labor union. In another case the New York Supreme Court has held that a toy-manufacturing concern may be enjoined from moving to Massachusetts, if it can be shown that its intention was to circumvent its contractual obligations. Again, the Regional Labor Board of New York is trying to force the return of a manufacturer of leather goods who has transferred his business to Greenfield, Mass.

These cases are particularly interesting because of the emphasis which the Administration is placing on decentralization of industry. By President Roosevelt, as well as by lesser officials, this has been advanced as an important objective of the New Deal. To encourage the movement subsistence homestead projects have been constructed. Industries have been advised to move plants into rural areas where overhead costs are smaller and where workmen can partially support themselves on their own land. But when companies take this advice they become slackers, in the opinion of the Regional Labor Board.

"Steps must be taken to prevent employers from escaping their obligations to National recovery," says that body, "by moving to a community where with impunity they can pay a far lower wage." If corporations are allowed to transfer to less congested areas the board fears there will be an exodus from centers like metropolitan New York. But is that not an objective of the decentralization plan?

It is clear that when contractual obligations exist between employers and employees the former can not be permitted to evade accepted responsibilities. But in the case of the leather goods manufacturer, the labor contract is said to have expired. Union employees were unwilling to accept the reduction in wages which the employer considered necessary to continuation of his business in New York. Consequently he moved to Greenfield and hired cheaper labor.

These incidents throw into bold relief the difficulty of trying to decentralize industry under the code system. The whole tendency of the codes is toward stabilization of industry as it is. Under a system of free initiative we might expect a considerable exodus from large centers where the cost of living is high. But if wages are to be equalized in small towns and large cities, one notable advantage of decentralization will be lost. Should the NRA attempt to uphold wage scales that may have been inflated because of the unnatural and socially undesirable concentration of industry in a few large pockets?

The problem is obviously complicated. But more perturbing than its complications is the conflict of objectives in proposed solutions.

On Regimented Artists.

No conscientious student of letters has been inclined to take too seriously the alarm that has been felt over the future of literature in Russia's proletarian state. After all it was only a natural part of the revolution that the intellectuals should have been "regimented" for propaganda purposes.

History shows that it is the part of the intellectuals during stability to support the established order and when that order becomes insupportable to express, in varying ways, the intellectual ferment that precedes all fundamental shifts in political power. Thus the writers in Russia long ago became revolutionary propagandists. And when the revolution came they extolled the new regime more blatantly, but not less effectively, than the writers in a capitalistic state bend their art toward support of the homely virtues whence capitalism draws its strength.

Writers know this. Somerset Maugham, in the preface to "East and West," takes pains to inform his readers that the editor of the magazine where his stories mostly appeared never told him what to write or what not to write. If it were not at least suspected that writers are "regimented," under whatever political system, such declarations of independence would be superfluous. But there are degrees of regimentation as of everything else. During a revolution the subtle concealment of propaganda under a layer of art disappears and the skilled writer becomes as unscrupulous as any hack publicity agent. That is what happened in Russia, when, in the phrase of Max Eastman, the artists were put in uniform.

The Russian revolution is now an accomplished fact. The need for obvious propaganda lessens. The die-hards may still believe that there is an unlimited distinction between true proletarian writers and bourgeois intellectuals. But Karl Radek, one of communism's most powerful thinkers, realizes that undiluted propaganda may eventually defeat its own ends. At a congress of all-Soviet writers in Moscow this week, Radek said that the bars must be let down and that the old theory of "he who is not with us is against us" would no longer rule in the arts.

And so it may soon be that the writers of Russia will lay aside their uniforms and the Russian artists in mufti will find new means for expression. Out of the chaos of revolution may appear the needed security which is the basis of all art. At the same time it may be well to speculate on the theory that the reason why literature has so lagged in the 300 years of America is because of its "regimentation" under such banners as Puritanism and Materialism. The growing determination of our writers to work under different standards and to talk openly of the place of propaganda in art is as significant as Radek's movement in the opposite direction.

Wings From Ecuador.

In good-will flights the good will is too often confined to officialdom; reaches too infrequently the unofficial people. But little Senora Hermalina U. de Briones, of Ecuador, who is not so very much longer than her name, has shown more than enough diplomatic charm to recommend her for the serious consideration of her country's foreign service.

Doubtless Providence had a hand in her adventurous flight to Washington. When gasoline gave out, and the fuel-line broke, and a preliminary landing was forced upon the Senora, she came down on the Eastern Shore, where hospitality is traditional. Yet her own courtesy proved equal to that of Richard S. Buckner, the Chestertown farmer who first aided her there. He wanted to go to Baltimore to see his wife. So, as if it were a matter of course, Senora de Briones interrupts her international flight to take him to Baltimore!

That gesture alone was worth the worry of the increasingly anxious diplomats who vainly awaited her at the Washington Airport during her trans-Chesapeake flights. Few aerial shipments have so gallantly earned a welcome in the United States as this 90 pounds of good-will from Ecuador.

Only those who build air castles see the silver linings of the clouds.

Develop the habit of kicking and few will try to pull your leg.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE FIRST MAJOR sea battle of the war took place off the Bight of Heligoland, in the North Sea. German ships which had been in hiding since the start of the war came out under cover of a heavy mist at day-break and proceeded to attack the British fleet. Two German cruisers were sunk, two German destroyers were sunk and a German battleship left the scene of battle in flames. The British reported they lost few lives and had two vessels slightly damaged.

THE GERMAN ADVANCE continued to strike deep at the heart of France, while the allied armies pursued a purely defensive action. Georges Clemenceau, French statesman, said, "France must keep cool and contain every inch of ground, which will exhaust the enemy on French territory, while England and Russia strike hard elsewhere."

On The Treaty Of Versailles.

"The Barbarous Peace Treaty."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read with great interest the letter of Mr. Alexandre D. Hericot, published in your columns today, which endeavored to correct a statement made in an article by Mr. Anton Angelo pertaining to doubts that the Bavarian government would back up the Kaiser's war policy.

I have never been in Bavaria myself, but I have relatives and numerous friends who have been in that country as tourists. All of them have told me that the Bavarians hate the Prussians like the proverbial evil eye, and that the animosity of the Bavarians toward the Prussians is far more accentuated than the antipathy of traditional Southerners against so-called Yankees.

Let it seem to be on Mr. Angelo's side, however. For, as I recollect, he did not state that Bavarian government officials expressed those war policy doubts, but he indicated, though he does not say so in as many words, that those doubts persisted among the people. This would be quite natural. It certainly would not have been the first time that part of the people of a country at war did not side with their government's war policy.

Mr. Hericot need not go any further than our own country. Perhaps he is familiar with the War of 1812. Is he perhaps aware that that war was very unpopular in some sections of the United States, notably New England? History records a series of devastating defeats to the American forces by their British enemies. Could it be possible that these defeats can be attributed to the unpopularity of that war with a large group of Americans? The only victory achieved by the Americans in that war was the Battle of New Orleans, which was fought two weeks after the peace treaty ending the war was signed.

Mr. Hericot also takes issue with Mr. Angelo's strictures about the barbarous Peace Treaty of Versailles. I don't think that anything can be said in favor of that vicious treaty. Mr. H. lets his prejudices ride him when he speculates about the terms the Germans would have enforced had they won the war. The Germans forced the Russians to sign a very harsh peace treaty at Brest Litovsk in 1917, but the terms were not remotely as savage as those effected two years later at Versailles. Nor did Bismarck attempt to force such iniquitous terms on France in 1871, despite Mr. Hericot's sanguine criticism of the Iron Chancellor.

Compared to the inhuman dictates of the Versailles Treaty, those terms were rather mild. Germany took Alsace-Lorraine from France, but France was not dismembered or cut in two by a so-called corridor as East Prussia is today. France was fully represented by accredited officials when the treaty was negotiated and signed at Frankfurt.

Yet at Versailles, in 1919, the German representatives were excluded from all negotiations and after the treaty had all been drafted by the Allies the Nazis were told to sign on the dotted line, or else. . . .

Mr. Hericot contends that the statements he cites give the impression that the German sense of honor is not very strong. But on the basis of this logic, what can Mr. Hericot say of the French sense of honor? What can be said of a country that welches on its just debts to a generous nation that loaned this money, taken from its taxpayers, to France at a time when the very existence of that country was at stake? What is to be said of the sense of honor of a country that can spend billions for fortifications and other military measures in fear of a now virtually impotent foe, but refuses to pay one cent now on its war debts to the United States?

I do not claim that France has no reason to fear Germany, even her apparently helpless state; for the attitude of France toward a disarmed and prostrate people beset by political and economic vicissitudes is so outrageous, inhuman and intolerant that there is no telling to what course continued oppression by the Nazis from within and by the French from without, may lead a people driven to desperation.

"That Horrible Treaty."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an interested reader of your newspaper, who has been following the tenor of your articles on European affairs quite closely, I wish to take issue with Mr. Alexandre D. Hericot, who, in a letter published in The Post of August 25, berates Mr. Angelo both for an alleged mistake as well as for his denunciation of the outrageous Treaty of Versailles.

Mr. Hericot's letter starts out with a contravention of Mr. Angelo's statement as to doubts harbored at the outbreak of the World War over the Bavarian government's support of the Kaiser's war policy. Perhaps Mr. Hericot is aware that there were doubts in the United States among many Americans until the very eve of the American declaration of war on Germany as to whether the American Government would join the Allies in support of their conflict against Germany.

The abortive Treaty of Versailles, in common with the Treaties of St. Germain and Trianon, which were imposed on the vanquished Central Powers by force after the Germans had been disarmed and rendered defenseless under the provisions of the armistice, is one of the darkest blot on the scroll of history. Millions of German nationals were forced under alien sovereignty and huge strips of Germany were cut away from Germany, including some of its most highly developed and productive regions, and handed over to foreign nations for exploitation to the grave economic damage of not only the German Reich but the rest of Europe as well.

Even the United States that gained nothing by the World War except billions of dollars in unpaid and uncollectible debts is a sufferer from the disastrous effects of that horrible treaty. The world depression, from which the United States suffers perhaps more acutely than any other country save Germany, can be traced almost directly to the effects of the Punic peace pact of Versailles.

Mr. Hericot cites also a long list of alleged offenses committed by the Germans and then proceeds to recapitulate his strictures with the assertion that his contentions give the impression that the German sense of honor is not very strong. But, on the basis of this logic, what can Mr. Hericot say of the French sense of honor? What can be said of a country that welches on its just debts to a generous nation that loaned this money, taken from its taxpayers, to France at a time when the very existence of that country was at stake? What is to be said of the sense of honor of a country that can spend billions for fortifications and other military measures in fear of a now virtually impotent foe, but refuses to pay one cent now on its war debts to the United States?

I do not claim that France has no reason to fear Germany, even her apparently helpless state; for the attitude of France toward a disarmed and prostrate people beset by political and economic vicissitudes is so outrageous, inhuman and intolerant that there is no telling to what course continued oppression by the Nazis from within and by the French from without, may lead a people driven to desperation.

large. And if that infamous treaty is not revised quite soon, the root of the evil will sprout into another disastrous war that may mean the end of all civilization as we know it today; I can't say that it is much of a civilization at that, but it is the best we were able to devise thus far. Destroy even that and we will be forced back into the Neanderthal stage.

An International Monstrosity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Mr. Alexandre D. Hericot, criticizing one of your able writers, Mr. Anton Angelo, seems to me rather far-fetched, and a rather dubious effort to drag a herring across the trail of misery and injustice precipitated by that international monstrosity, the notorious Treaty of Versailles.

I have relatives who have visited Bavaria and many friends who hail from that country, and my information is that the animosity of the Bavarians toward the Prussians is grounded so deeply that it transcends all other considerations. Of the alleged obligations toward Prussia cited by Mr. Hericot, I have no knowledge and care less, but I dare say that those obligations, if they clashed with Bavarian interests, would be of no more value than the obligations of South Carolina were toward the Union when South Carolina troops attacked Fort Sumter and thereby precipitated the Civil War.

Without question, there must have been doubts among the Bavarian people as to whether their government would back the Kaiser's war policy. What that government actually did, or intended to do, is quite another matter. The government of a European state is far less amenable to the desires of its people than the government of an American State.

I am unable to find any justification for Mr. Hericot's criticism, for Mr. Angelo does not state that any doubts were voiced on the part of the government as to Bavaria's participation in the war. As a matter of fact, I can recall now that even in France the hope was held that not only Bavaria but other South German states would refuse to join in the war in 1914.

Mr. Angelo's darts at the provisions of the Punic peace treaty are not only accurate but they are also in the most notorious third degree manner, also arouses the ire of Mr. Hericot. In contravention of that, I refer to your most elucidating editorial, "The Root of the Evil," in the monstrous treaty as international crime, especially in the light of events in Germany today, or is it not? And how long can Germany go on and tolerate this horrible injustice without shattering the peace of Europe and the rest of the world?

The provisions of that Carthaginian peace are not generally known. Few Americans take the trouble to peruse it. I have a copy of the excuse for a peace treaty in my office and the more I survey it, the more I marvel that a civilized people can bear to be branded with the stigma of international outcasts to their great spiritual, political and economic damage. Yet the German people have stood this horror for 15 years and the time may soon come when their patience is exhausted.

Hitler, of course, capitalizes this discontent. He does not fail to hammer this fact home to the Germans and at the same time blame them with the mendacious nonsense that the Jews are mainly responsible for German woes. At the same time France is doing everything in her power to prevent a revision of that disastrous treaty.

There is no question that France is the peace disturber of Europe today, and it is high time that that country be viewed in a more realistic light. If any war develops, the origin of that conflict can be laid very likely to France. The Saar plebiscite to be held next January, may, if France does not abide by the results, ignite the long-dreaded conflagration. Americans have only one consolation: that the United States Senate refused to ratify the accursed Treaty of Versailles. But that, alas, is a very poor consolation.

The Post Impressionist

"To Her Very Finger Tips."

Postoffice, Wednesday.
I HAVE been hesitating about writing you for some time," she writes us now. . . .

(We don't see why she hesitated. There are a few people we could mention who aren't half hesitant enough. This correspondent writes, if not a better-perfect letter, at least a very good hand.)

"And now that I do write," she continues, "if you think what I write is worth publishing, I do hope, anyway, you won't put my whole name to it, will you?"

Dear lady, certainly not!

We always respect the rare wishes of the Column's correspondents for anonymity. And when the wishes are a woman's, those wishes become laws.

Besides which, when we opened the happy envelope that embraced your delicately scented missive, our all too impatient knife cut off half your graceful signature. The severed portion fluttered to the floor. And the jealous office-cat—a torrid-shin hussy of whose intentions we have lately not attempted to conceal our weariness—ran away with it.

We are in despair that anything you wrote should have been treated thus, even by an animal whose petty spite is beneath both your attention and ours. We are the sadder because your address seems to have vanished along with the latter section of your name, and we had hoped to write to you and ask you to grant an interview so we might apologize a person.

Alas, not alone would we not print your whole name if we could. We could not print it even if we cruelly would!

Of course, were we ungrateful—which Heaven forefend—we might simply suppress your letter in its entirety and thus pretend never to have received it. Newspaper offices are notoriously the last places to which to address a letter if you have any hope, dear lady, of its reaching the addressed person—and to mention any hope of its reaching the addressed person before being first read by a dozen persons not addressed. Also, we might have availed ourselves of a technical evasion.

We invariably require that both the correspondent's name and address be affixed to any communication we are to consider using, an affixing "not necessarily for publication"—in the phraseology of the late Joseph Addison's legislation, made and amended for "The Spectator," "but as a token of good faith." Moreover, we have always interpreted this statute as meaning the whole name and address, and have held that the recipient was not responsible in any case of the signature and (or) address' damage or loss in or after transit. If said name (or) address, or any fraction thereof, were thus damaged or lost, we held ourselves free to consider that the letter was anonymous within the meaning of the Act and therefore liable to extinction at our discretion. Nor have we ever once been overruled in this opinion by the appellate editorial court.

Nevertheless, we esteem ourselves equally free to follow an antithetical course. We maintain that, still within the terms of the Act, a partial name and address, if they, or either of them, have or have been obviously affixed to the best of the writer's ability, and then rendered illegible through any mischance outside the writer's control, may, we may regard the remnant as admissible evidence toward that good faith which Mr. Addison wisely demanded.

This is so and more so when the applicant is of the feminine gender. Therefore, we, in the case now before us, hold only the cat guilty, dear lady. We print your letter, reserving solely the right to append the surviving fraction of your signature.

After which few words of apology and explanation, we generously give you the floor.

"The thing I mean that's on my mind," you write, "is where the Major and Mrs. Kestler have been saying in your Column about red finger nails and rouge, and so on. She seems to think they're good things to attract fellows. He seems to think they're bad morals. Well, I have the reddest reddest lips and all I bet, in Washington. And all the fellows liked taking me around, but that was all. So all my girl friends were getting married but me. So then I got a hunch: I mean I played the simple girl, letting my hair grow and saving dollars a week by cutting out the rouge and nail dye. Well, then, believe it or not, my roof-garden bids adieu a downward curve, but I got three 'Will-you-marry-me's' before I'd saved a week's pay. And now my only trouble is to pick the best man. I mean the best to marry; I mean I don't care who his best man is, if you understand. 'GLADYS—'"

"I'm a blonde, have pretty good features, nothing to write home about, though; a complexion to match and fair figure. But I haven't got much conversation; I mean I'm not quick on the talk, if you understand."

"Well, from when I was 18 till last month I thought I could make up for it by making up. I went in for the reddest reddest lips and all I bet, in Washington. And all the fellows liked taking me around, but that was all. So all my girl friends were getting married but me. So then I got a hunch: I mean I played the simple girl, letting my hair grow and saving dollars a week by cutting out the rouge and nail dye. Well, then, believe it or not, my roof-garden bids adieu a downward curve, but I got three 'Will-you-marry-me's' before I'd saved a week's pay. And now my only trouble is to pick the best man. I mean the best to marry; I mean I don't care who his best man is, if you understand. 'GLADYS—'"

Dear half-named lady, we do understand! But will Mrs. Kestler? And, oh, will the Major?

Barging Through Europe

Thoroughly European.

G DYNIA, Poland.—Dear Aleck: Well, Aleck, we shook the dust of Copenhagen off of our feet and here we are in the Polish Corridor. We arrived here by an American boat, a Seaside liner, 13 days out of New York and headed for Leningrad. We were enthusiastic when we learned we could get passage on a liner because we wanted to see some Americans again.

Imagine our disappointment, Aleck, to find they were not Americans at all, but New Yorkers. I can make myself better understood by the French, Germans and Danes. It is much fun, however, Aleck, because Copenhagen was the first European port they had touched and they are very inexperienced in European travel. We are thoroughly European by now, and a good joke can imagine how we lord it over them. Indeed, I kept it secret for a couple of days that I was an American, and one fellow said it was amazing how well I could speak English for never having been in America. Ho, ho, what a good joke it was on him—or on me, Aleck. Anyway, it was a joke.

Every time someone remarks on anything quaint or different he saw in Denmark, Aleck, I lift my brows and ask:

"Is it your first travel abroad?" It puts him immediately in his place and at the same time places the hallmark of a widely traveled man upon me.

This port, Aleck, is the one set up by the Poles in the Polish corridor as a port of their own, apparently not being pleased or so certain of the Danzig Free City, set up by the Versailles treaty. It is only about an hour's ride by bus to Danzig, but there is as much difference between the two ports as there is between daylight and dark, to use a quaint American expression. It has been built less than 10 years and is thoroughly Polish.

And, Aleck, although it is but a short bus ride to Danzig, it is a very difficult trip to negotiate for even so widely traveled a man as I. First, you get your money changed into Polish at about five Polish something to a dollar and then in Danzig they demand, except at the larger establishments, Danzig units, which are but three to a dollar. A man has to take an economist with him, and with all the economists at work on a full time basis for Mr. Roosevelt you can imagine how foolhardy it would be for one to take an economist with him.

At Zoppot, between here and Danzig, there is quite a fashionable Baltic watering resort and casino. The women are ahead of us in the modernity of their bathing suits, if possible, Aleck, which is to say, they have taken about two inches off of either end. The men, if you are interested, are way behind. They are still wearing the loose-fitting suits of 1912 and they look very funny in same.

What defeated our party, Aleck, was that youngsters up to 16 didn't seem to be concerned about a suit. They simply stripped on the beach and went right on in the surf. The young woman on the boat who is going from Washington to marry one of Ambassador Bullitt's staff said she did not think the youngsters should have this much privilege.

By the way, Aleck, we also have a wife on board who is going to join her husband, who is a member of Bullitt's staff. Bullitt gathered up his crowd when we recognized Russia, and departed posthaste. Now the members of his staff are sending for their wives and sweethearts.

Yours for getting the families back together, Aleck.

Oust Lawyer Crooks, Clean House, Bar Told

Dishonest Members Already Tolerated Too Long, Public Wrath Demands Immediate Action, Leader Tells Association.

Milwaukee, Aug. 28 (AP).—Wellington sentiment for a curb on dishonest lawyers burst over the American Bar Association convention today as its president demanded an immediate housecleaning.

Earle W. Evans, of Wichita, Kan., head of the association, wanted that the public holds the entire legal profession in suspicion because of the activities of some of its members.

He admitted there have been acts warranting the public's distrust, then said:

"We are all suffering. Our influence is minimized, our honesty doubted, and our leadership repudiated, all because of the sins of a relatively few. Let us no longer delay the already too long deferred housecleaning. Let us begin it at once."

Mr. Evans said the depression persists and leadership is acutely needed. Because of the public's neglect of important duties, advocates of other forms of government have been enabled to go to lengths that otherwise would not have been tolerated. Crime is costing more than twenty billion dollars annually, he said.

But the country has not gone to the bow-wows, he added, and it is not going there either unless there unhappily occurs a collapse of patriotism of most improbable proportions. He expressed belief that the people are commencing to take account of themselves and said an aroused citizenry, intelligently led, will always be able to avert or overcome threatened dangers in this country. The necessary re-education can be done best and the leadership better supplied by the lawyers, he asserted.

Capone Files New Petition For Freedom

Supreme Court Again Urged to Review Conviction.

(Associated Press.) Seeking freedom from America's "Devil's Island," Alphonse Capone, once Chicago's gangster chief, yesterday appealed to the Supreme Court to reverse decisions of lower courts that denied his claim of conviction after the statute of limitations had expired.

It was the second time the erstwhile "Public Enemy No. 1" had asked the Supreme Court to review his conviction. His prison sentences aggregate 11 years and fine totaling $50,000, together with costs of prosecution, for violation of the income tax laws.

From behind his cell bars in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., Capone directed his attorneys here, William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, Jr., to take the new step. But the gangster was whisked away in secrecy from Atlanta to the Government's prison for bad men at Alcatraz Island, in San Francisco Bay, before the petition was filed here.

The document charges that Capone was convicted on three counts in an Illinois Federal court of violating the income tax law after the three-year statute of limitations had expired. The convictions, it cited, were on charges of income tax evasion in the calendar years 1925, 1926 and 1927, while indictments were not returned until June 5, 1931.

Capone's attorneys cited the three-year limitation of statutes for violations of internal revenue laws. At "Scarface Al's" trial Government counsel maintained that in cases where defendants defend themselves or attempted to defraud the Government, the limitation was six years.

The issue was raised at the time of the trial, but the court ruled that Capone had sought to defraud the Government.

In seeking freedom, Capone took the matter to the Supreme Court in 1932, but on May 2, that tribunal denied a review of his case. He then reviewed it on three counts in the Federal Court for the North Georgia district through application for a writ of habeas corpus against Warden A. C. Aderhold at Atlanta. When this was overruled, he appealed to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, which affirmed the judgment of the lower court. Capone thus pursued his fight to the Supreme Court yesterday. Action will not come in the case until the October session.

Fewer Sentenced To Virginia Prison

Richmond, Aug. 28 (AP).—A substantial decrease in the number of new commitments to the State penitentiary was reported today by Maj. Rice M. Yonell, superintendent of the State penitentiary, as he compared the number of the first eight months of 1933 with the number to date this year.

The 1933 figure as of August 31, 1933, was 1,248. The number in 1934 to date has been 1,107. The penitentiary population now is 891. In addition to these, 180 convicted of felonies are at the State farm, with 450 jail prisoners.

The road camp population now is 2,600. This figure includes both the number of jail prisoners and felons.

Frank B. Kellogg, American judge in the Permanent Court of International Justice, was an attentive listener at a sectional meeting on international law at the American Bar Association's convention here today.

The former Secretary of State, when called upon for an impromptu speech, said:

"As for international law, I don't know much about it—having been Secretary of State."

Among the trials and tribulations of a bar examiner is that of reading examination papers "which indicate a woeful lack of general information," said Alexander Armstrong, chairman of the Maryland State Board of Law Examiners at the National conference of bar examiners.

Here are some specimens of questions and answers:

Q.—Can a lost will be probated.

A.—Ordinarily, it can be proved and probated by the evidence of the witnesses and the testator, but this evidence must be clear and undisputed.

Q.—Upon what grounds may a divorce a mensa et thoro be granted?

A.—Cruelty, desertion and adultery.

Q.—Is the common law a part of our national jurisprudence?

A.—In so far as it aids the Government and is not reversed.

Dr. Rokuichiro Masujima, Japan's representative at the convention, is probably the most picturesque of all the lawyers here. He wears a flowing black robe, which hides from view a pair of loose-fitting slippers. An honorary member of the bar association, Dr. Masujima said the principal trouble between the people of the United States and those of Japan are that they are ignorant of each other.

Lord Tomlin, lord of appeal in ordinary and a life peer in Britain, here to address the bar association, doesn't feel capable of solving the foreign trade problem.

"If the leading economists can't agree, you can't expect me to offer you a solution for the problem," said Lord Tomlin.

St. Paul, Aug. 28 (AP).—Homer Van Meter, Dillinger lieutenant, died under a hail of police lead inspired by his own associates who feared his promiscuous associations with lawless would bank raids.

This story, disclosed today by a reliable source, gave police a fresh investigative angle. Chief of Police Frank J. Murphy, who led the officers who shot Van Meter in a blind alley here Thursday night, said it would be investigated carefully. Other leads have proved fruitless.

The latest report linked George ("Baby Face") Nelson, much-sought, much-feared Dillinger associate, and several others in a new plot to make simultaneous swift raids on two northern Minnesota banks to replenish depleted coffers and then flee to a hideout believed near the Canadian border.

Other reported members of the gang said to have given police the tip that led to Van Meter's death are John Hamilton, Dillinger lieutenant often reported dead; Alvin Karpis and Fred Barker, sought for the $200,000 Edward G. Bremer abduction here, and Arthur ("Doc") Barker, brother of Fred.

Northern Minnesota banks were said to have been chosen for the forays because of the nearness to the reported hideout and to the border.

Nelson was reported recently to have been seen, apparently "looking over" a bank in Virginia, Minn. A bank in Duluth was said to have been chosen for the second raid.

Fears among the members of the gang, said to number ten, including several recruits, that Van Meter's predilection for women might lead to his capture and subsequent revelation of the plans, every detail of which, it was reported, had been prompted by the decision to tell police where they could get him.

The source of this information added that the plans had apparently been shelved temporarily until "heat" resulting from Van Meter's slaying had died down.

Meanwhile, Chief Cullen announced that Opal Meliga, St. Paul waitress known to have been friendly with the slain gangster, who has been held by police since he was killed, would be returned to the Sauk Centre (Minn.) School for Girls as a parole violator.

Dr. Meredith Home From London Trip

During her stay in London she graduated at the Royal Free Hospital and the School of Medicine for Women, and did postgraduate work at the Cancer Hospital and the Great Ormond Street Hospital for Children.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Imaginary Interviews: The President on the Liberty League.

Q. Mr. Roosevelt, what do you think of the American Liberty League?

A. It looks to me as if the Detroit Tigers are in.

Q. I said American Liberty League.

A. Oh, you mean that new organization of Democrats to save America from the Democrats. Well, I'm not complaining.

Q. Have you read its program?

A. Slap by slap.

Q. You have observed, have you not, that Al Smith is one of the leaders of the league?

A. Yes. I was beginning to wonder what had become of him.

Q. And there's John W. Davis; he runs for President once, you know.

A. Yes, I was apparently one of the few who did know.

Q. What do you think of J. Edgar Hoover's connection with the Liberty League?

A. Every man is entitled to the right to criticize an administration, and Mr. Hoover is a stickler for his rights.

Q. The league states that its chief purpose is to save the Constitution.

A. That's their story and they're sticking to it.

Q. Don't you think that any administration should welcome criticism?

A. Yes, but I'm getting plenty.

Q. Don't you realize that there should be a medium for the voicing of opposition at a time like this in the country's history?

A. Yes, but I want to be sure it isn't ventriloquism.

Q. Mr. Wadsworth says a paramount purpose of the league is to educate the public on the importance of preserving our ancient form of government. Do you think the education is necessary?

A. Education is all right, but my administration is well equipped to do the teaching. Look at all those college professors I have working for me.

Q. One league implies that you are tending to scrap fundamental principles of the Constitution.

A. The league worries too much. Q. It holds that you are experimenting too much. What about that?

A. When I took hold of the patient he was so far gone that it was a question whether even experiments could save him.

Q. Do you consider the patient saved?

A. One of the best signs that the worst is over is when the opposition doctors gather under the windows and begin shouting suggestions on what to do next.

Q. Mr. President, is there any message you would like to send to the league?

A. Yes. Give it my regards and tell it that there was a time when I was worried about the country's future, too!

Church Wipes Out Debt of $70,000

Winchester, Va., Aug. 28 (Sp.).—The Rev. George W. Stover, pastor of Winchester United Brethren Church, said today that the congregation had wiped out the church debt of the last 12 years, principal and interest totaling more than $70,000.

Each year the Rev. Stover declared, has seen the debt dwindle and when the twelfth anniversary of the dedication of the present edifice was celebrated Sunday members gave cash and signed pledges for more than enough to pay the balance.

A few years ago the United Brethren purchased a lot adjoining the church and more than half of the $2,500 debt on that has been paid, Mr. Stover added.

In these appellate proceedings two members of the board of supervisors of the affected county sit with the compensation board.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

"An Outline of Religion."

An interesting and extremely valuable book of over 700 pages, copiously illustrated, has just been published. It is called "An Outline of Religion." The author is E. R. Appleton, and a foreword is supplied by the famous American clergyman, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

The huge volume is divided into five parts: 1. The Egg of Creation: Religion until the incarnation. 2. The Bright and Morning Star: the life of Christ. 3. A Rushing Mighty Wind: From Pentecost to the Reformation. 4. The Fountain of Life: From the Reformation to the Great War. 5. Man Made in the Image of God: Individual Guidance.

Although this book is written by a British scholar, the language is purposely elementary, which is a good thing. It is assumed by the author that the average reader will know nothing of the history of religion, and will not understand technical terms. Thus the style from beginning to end is extremely simple and transparently clear; which also adds to the interest of the narrative.

Secondly, although the book purports to be an impartial and accurate account of the various religions of the world, and in detail of the history of the Christian religion from its origin to 1934, the author is a devout, sincere, and earnest believer in the Christian religion; and naturally an advocate. He is, however, fair-minded; and there is no con- siderable or narrow-minded spirit in his display anywhere in the work.

As a believer in the good accomplished by the Reformation, he writes from that standpoint, but without offense to those who might not agree.

The first 335 pages bring us to the birth of Christ. There are chapters called in the Beginning, Children in the Dark, Gods Many and Lords Many, The Wisdom of Men, The One Living and True God. The author quotes as his motto for the book the impressive words over the arch at the entrance to the University of Virginia.

Pass Through This Gateway and Seek The Light of Truth The Way of Honor

The Will to Work for Men. As there are many "Outlines" of Science and History and other subjects nowadays, it is a good idea to prepare this "Outline of Religion." And it would be a good idea for boys and girls to read it, although mature persons who are not familiar with its details will find much profit.

Toward the close, the author looks forward to a time when the nations of the world will dwell together in friendship.

Virginia to Oppose Freight Rate Boost

Richmond, Aug. 28 (Sp.).—The State corporation commission will intervene in the plea of the rail carriers to the Interstate Commerce Commission for higher freight rates, and will protest against the petition, William Meade Fletcher, member of the commission in charge of railroads matters, said today.

H. E. Ketner, commerce counsel of the commission, said the copies of the application have not yet been received and that the Virginia protest could not be drafted until the full text of the carriers' assertions could be studied.

20 States' Attorneys To Ask Pay Increases

EDWIN ALEXANDER HALSEY, Secretary of the Senate. Probably knows Senators, their foibles, members of the Press Gallery and the whole rignarole of that body better than anyone who has been there since 1897, when he first walked its plush corridors as a page boy. A Democrat, first, last and always, he is the author of the famous definition: "What is a Democrat?" Amended it reads: "One who votes the ticket." His post, a right swell job with car and chauffeur, keeps machinery of the chamber moving. Served similarly at Houston, Tex., 1928, and Chicago, 1932. Professional looking, graceful, well-mannered, he plays golf with perspiring energy. His recreations: Reading the Congressional Record, viewing movies with the "Mrs." and studying political campaigns.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

The One Who Must Pay Has Right to Forbid

By Robert Quillen

When free people are doing anything that must inevitably lead to their ruin, they resent and resist any government effort to make them be sensible.

But when folly has finished them, they turn to the government—which means the whole people—and say: "It is your business to save us."

Since that happens more and more frequently and the cost to taxpayers mounts higher and higher, the people must soon find an answer to this question: "If we have an obligation to save the victims of folly, have we not also the right to restrain those who would do foolish things?"

Consider, for example, the man who would build a shirt factory. He knows the shirt business; he knows there is money in it. All he needs is the capital to build and equip a factory, and then, assuming that he can sell his product, he will make himself rich.

Now there are two methods by which he can get the capital he needs. He can sell stock or borrow from banks. In either case he will be using other people's money.

So he gets the money and builds the factory and then he makes a dreadful discovery. The country already has ten times the number of shirt factories it needs.

He can't sell his product. Or, if he does sell it, he takes his losses from another factory. If he can't sell shirts, he goes broke. If he does sell shirts, he helps to break the other fellow.

In either case, banks or stock-

"Fire College" To Hear Advice From Experts

Record Number Expected to Enroll for Course at Maryland U.

Outstanding firefighters of Maryland and nearby States, will address the annual Volunteer Firemen's Short Course at the University of Maryland next week, according to the official program released yesterday.

Attendance this year is expected to exceed all previous sessions, Noble Rushe, president of the Maryland Firemen's Association, said last night.

The three-day program will open at 8 a. m., Tuesday with registration. Dr. A. N. Johnson, dean of the School of Engineering, will open the course at 10 a. m.

There will be an address of welcome by Dr. R. A. Pearson, president of the University. Rushe will then tell the students about the "Fire College," as the course is sometimes known.

Walter E. Hough, former general chairman of the Baltimore Fire Council, will discuss "The Volunteer Firemen and the Public." Howard Travers, chief of the Baltimore Fire Department, will speak also.

Dr. H. B. McDonnell, of the University, will explain "The Chemistry of Fire." The course will be presided over by Sherwood Brockwell, fire marshal of North Carolina, considered one of the outstanding firefighters in the United States.

The afternoon sessions each day will include practical field work and demonstrations by the Baltimore Fire Department of the latest fire-extinguishing methods. Tuesday this will include first aid, gas masks, chemical extinguishers, truck operations, small hose, pumps, ladders and minor equipment.

Other large fish were caught in the Potomac by Sonny Palmer, Williamsport, a 3 1/2-pound small-mouth bass; C. S. ## Capital Night Clubs Offering Right Food and Right Drinks Shoreham Gives Benefits of Foreign Travel; Fashion Show Scheduled at Maryland Club Gardens Tonight; Lotus at Matinee.

By Kay Ware.

This way, ladies and gentlemen. There's something going on every minute; the trick is to look in the right direction.

You can amuse some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, as Lincoln didn't say. When it comes to eating, drinking and entertainment, Washington believes in amusing all of the people all of the time. A man-sized job.

Foreign travel is broadening, even diverting. It's a lot of trouble packing all those clothes, though. And the simplest thing to do is to take the Shoreham terrace lately, you different country or continent each week.

If you've dropped in, or out on the Shoreham terrace lately, you know more than you did about France and Mexico. This week you'll find yourself in the Orient. It's not merely a question of decorations, and what is familiarly known as atmosphere. There's the right food, and the right drinks. A liberal education in foreign fare is not to be sniffed at.

Entertainers this week are La Fayette and La Verne. After seeing them in "Flying Down to Rio" and "They Had to Get Married" on the screen, they're time to study them in three dimensions. They should know what this country needs, in the way of a good five-minute dance, for they've been dancing recently before World's Fair crowds in Chicago.

Fashion Show Tonight.

A fashion show this evening at Maryland Club Gardens will display not only the models but the newest ideas in fall and winter styles. Fifteen of Washington's fairest style-displays will parade at 10 p. m.

Serving tea at a fashion show is usually considered the height of elegance. Now we have with us a fashion show, with late supper on the side.

In mixing drinks, bartender Meyers at the Carlton has the master. He says he invents a drink simply "by having an idea and putting it together."

"Sounds simple enough, but the result is a veritable masterpiece. His 'Carlton special' and 'King Cocktail' are good examples."

And with all this genius exerted do the prices rise? They do not. You spend a delightful hour in the smart lounge, and sip a delicious concoction, and widen your eyes in amazement when the check comes around.

In days of old, when knights were bold—they couldn't have fried chicken in a castle. Rosdhu Castle is an authentic reproduction of an old Scotch one.

equipped with most and all. And there may be had for the asking and a nominal charge lunch, tea and dinner, or one after the other. Fried chicken is the specialty, but there are plenty of other things to eat that have nothing to do with dull menus of the past. There is an orchestra playing, dancing, and all the other comforts of dining out.

The rooms are large and high-ceilinged, and old portraits, books in ancient bindings and coats of arms set in the windows carry out the castle flavor.

About-town Menu.

Madison—Spanish anything. Especially sherry eggs, Spanish style.

Powhatan—Filet of sole. Mayflower—Field day for lovers of potato chips.

Ramon's—That special cheese for dessert. American cream, roquefort, pimento, neatly mixed.

Jean's—Spaghetti anchovy with butter sauce.

Little Tea House—Boston brown bread.

Normandy Farms—French trifles and favors.

When you hit a dull spot in the afternoon, have time to spare and don't know where to spend it, remember the matinee floor show at the Lotus.

This week Lew Davis is master of ceremonies at the Lotus, taking the place of Al Horton, who is vacationing at Virginia Beach. He took his guitar with him, and will probably be doing a Pied Piper stunt up and down the beach, with a trail after him of everything from bathers to fishes.

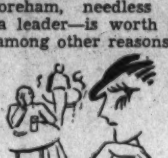

Theodore and Wright are features this week, dancing bolero and carica. Howard Montgomery, who sold in "Fifty Million Frenchmen," picked up some French ideas about what the well-dressed man will wear, and is using them in hat and cane dance. Maito and Therese go apacé, and to continue with the program, Lew Davis sings "There's Nothing Wrong in a Kiss." He's telling us.

Hawaiian Music.

Hi-Hat—it's an ideal setting when you want to show off your long eyelashes, or your fiancée's. When the Hawaiian minstrels come to your table, ask them to play some native songs. They're lovely. And watch the fingers of the man who plays the steel instrument (never mind the name).

Introducing certain people of importance. Or, to lift another title, these charming people. Barnee, at the Shoreham, needless to say orchestra leader—is worth remembering, among other reasons for his

New York shoulders. See if you don't agree.

Pete Macias, who holds forth on the Powhatan Roof, is known here and there as the debutante's delight. One of those people who light up a room when they enter.

Leon, the Madrilion, has a weakness for pre-war European langoes. Harry Albert, Arlington, curly-haired and smiling, will give excellent service on request dance numbers.

Happy Walker, Lowenkeller, has a busy life being host and property man all at the same time.

Al Norton, Lotus, may be watched for an hour at a time, and never stops moving.

Arthur Godfrey is out of town, but his ghost lingers on at Club Michel Roof, and if you close your eyes while the orchestra plays you'll be sure he never left. Only two weeks, girls, and he'll be back.

Before leaving, Godfrey was host last Friday night at one of those large-sized parties. He entertained the cast of "Going Native" revue at a farewell party. The table was well stretched out to accommodate everybody. It was so long, in fact, that Arthur Godfrey was forced to make the same speech twice, once at each end of the table.

"Loewenkeller, Goofy Feller, Cavalier, Stein of Beer," so goes the last of the silly song. This, accompanied with the ciphers of the singing waiters and the ump-tump-tump of the drum makes it a place of delightful informality.

Try to identify the names. The "Goofy feller" might be the man who plays the traps in the orchestra. At least, the waiters identify him as such. "Cavalier" undoubtedly applies to "Happy Walker." For obvious reasons, if you know him, and for obvious reasons if you don't. "Stein of Beer" needs no introduction. You'll see scores of them drifting by. The waiters carry almost a dozen at a time.

Local Wine List.

Madrilion—Codornai champagne.

Willard—Dry Martini.

Club Michel—Sloe gin rickey.

Carlton—Habanero special.

Arlington—Planter's punch.

Macina—Italian wines.

Jean—Sherry.

Hi-Hat—Poussé, cafe. Takes 25 minutes to make; excellent if you take your liqueurs in layers; if it's new to you, the manager tells you how to drink it. Certainly it's one drink that can't be swallowed by instinct.

Havens Named Aid Of Harlow at W. M.

Westminster, Md., Aug. 27.—Charles Havens, director of recreation for the City of Rome, N. Y., has been named assistant football coach by Richard C. Harlow, head coach, according to announcement made by the Western Maryland College Athletic Association today.

Havens' athletic record at Western Maryland, before his graduation in 1930, was outstanding. He played on the city baseball team, and teams and participated in every football game played by the varsity during his last three years. His work as a center was brilliant, and in 1929 he captained the team that won 11 games and lost none, including victories over Georgetown and Maryland and the smothering of a strong Temple team by the score of 23 to 0.

Havens has devoted the major portion of his time since his graduation from Western Maryland to coaching, officiating in football and basketball, and to playground and recreational work. In the fall of 1931 he assisted Coach Harlow on the hill. In 1932 he coached a professional football team in Utica, N. Y., and in 1933 coached the St. Albans Academy football team, officiated in a number of football games, and played with the Syracuse professional team, champions of Central New York.

Five Contracts In Montgomery Total $131,185

School Work Is Approved by Board; Milk Rules Are Amended.

Five contracts, involving expenditure of $131,185 of public funds, were approved yesterday by the Montgomery Board of County Commissioners. The board also approved two amendments to milk regulations of the board of health.

The contracts entered into by the board included: J. ### Kensington Phone Changes Ordered Modernized System Will Eliminate Old Plant.

The Kensington, Md., telephone exchange will be modernized by installation of a common battery system in November, announced P. J. Little, commercial superintendent of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., of Baltimore, Md., last night.

Mr. Little's statement was released following a meeting with the executive and advisory committee of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce at the home of Washington I. Cleveland, president of the chamber.

Two Envoys Make Ready New Homes

Bulgarian Charge Takes Lease on Perot's House.

McCormick Home, Sold to Brazil, Is Being Redecorated.

During these early fall days Washington finds many members of official and resident society returning to superintend the opening of their homes for the coming season. Many homes have been boarded up for a year or more, and it is with delight that people who pass by find barriers removed from windows and doors and the houses being put into order.

The most recent of the houses to be opened is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Perot, at 2881 Woodland drive, which has been closed since the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Perot and their children to New York, over a year ago. This charming home, which has been the scene of many attractive parties, has been leased by the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria and Mme. Petroff Tchomakoff, who will move in today, and for the coming season it will be the Legation of Bulgaria. The Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Petroff Tchomakoff, who have been in the Capital a little less than a year, have been making their home at 2101 K street.

The famous old McCormick house at 3000 Massachusetts avenue, which in years gone by was the scene of brilliant festivities when the late Mrs. Robert McCormick owned and occupied it, has been bought by the Brazilian government. Heretofore each envoy had the choice of renewing the lease of his retiring colleague, or leasing another building which suited his taste. Now, however, McCormick house purchase adds another permanent embassy on Massachusetts avenue, which vies for honors with Sixteenth street for the title of "embassy row."

The new Brazilian Embassy which was occupied last winter for a short time by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Kent Legare, when they introduced to society the latter's sister, Miss Julie Bell Zimmerman, is now being redecorated. In addition to being built to house the embassy staff. The new host and hostess who will move in after the first of the year, will be the newly appointed Ambassador of Brazil, Mr. Oswaldo Aranha, and Mrs. de Aranha, who have been in Europe for some time. They will arrive in New York September 13, aboard the Rex, and will come direct to Washington.

Another house which will become foreign territory is that at 5630 Sixteenth street, of which the Minister of El Salvador, Senor Dr. Don Hector Castro, will take possession at the end of the week. The legation offices, heretofore in the National Press Building, will be moved to the house in several days. Senora de Castro, who is in El Salvador, will not come to the Capital until early in December.

Culbertson on Bridge

Lead in Trumps.
If I were teaching Bridge to someone who wanted to lose instead of win, I might very possibly begin by teaching him that old adage, "When in doubt, lead trumps."

In the first place, I don't entirely understand the phrase. What, exactly, is meant by doubt?

In the second place, if you assume the doubt to be as thick as a London fog, there is probably no more advantage in leading trumps than in leading anything else.

In the third place, if the doubt is not that thick, it isn't doubt and the lead should be based on inferences rather than vague generalizations.

In the fourth place, the doubt should seldom, if ever, be that thick. Nevertheless, there are cases when a trump lead is not only correct, but the only one which can defeat the contract, as in the hand below—but in this case the lead was selected by the West player, not because he was floundering about and just happened to light upon the right card, but because he realized from the bidding that it would very probably aid his chances of defeating the contract if he reduced the Dummy's ruffing power.

Insects Hold No Terror for Her as Subjects in Laboratory.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

THE sight of a worm writhing along makes the bravest woman shiver.

But for Dr. Eloise Cram, who is in charge of the work on poultry parasites in the Bureau of Animal Industry at the Department of Agriculture, worms hold no terrors.

She spends long hours studying their development, family life and habits. And she "just loves it," she said yesterday, somewhat enjoying the amazement her statement caused.

For eight years now Dr. Cram has been concentrating on those particular parasites that infect poultry. Tapeworms, round worms, and many kinds that have no names, "for as yet," she says, "little is known about the different varieties in this country."

When Dr. Cram was a student at the University of Chicago she was more interested in bacteriology than parasitology. Dr. D. H. Ransom, then chief of the zoological division in the Department of Agriculture, went to Chicago to study parasites that infect swine. He enlisted the aid of the young bacteriologist, who became so interested in the work that she continued her studies in parasitology. She came to Washington, continued her work in the Bureau of Animal Industry and received her Ph. D. at George Washington University.

Field for Discovery.

"So far little is known about the effects of parasites on poultry in this country," Dr. Cram says, "but it is a subject of importance to every housewife. When chickens are attacked by worms they lay fewer eggs and have less vitality. We are not so much interested in increasing the number of chickens as in improving the quality."

With the advent of the large poultry farms where many chickens are crowded into a small space, the number of parasites has increased. Dr. Cram says, and the mortality among new-born chickens is greater today than it has ever been. Much of the work of the poultry division is in teaching farmers to keep their little chickens from becoming infected.

"We are especially interested in protecting the young chickens," Dr. Cram explained. "Farmers must learn to keep these chickens away from the older ones who might spread disease. This is comparatively simple since little chickens can be raised in electric heaters, and kept on wire floors. In this way they are protected."

Farm Wives Can Help.

"Farm wives can do much to keep their poultry free from parasites," said Dr. Cram. "The bugs which carry them, are most often bred in the piles of damp rubbish so often seen in farm yards. If wives would be careful to keep their back yards sanitary and dry, free of rubbish and dirt, there would be fewer parasites."

Diet is also important if chickens are to be kept free of parasites, Dr. Cram says.

"Chickens have to have a diet rich in minerals and vitamins," she says. "Too often poultry raisers fail to recognize this. In the days when chickens were allowed to range over the farm, they could supplement their diet, and get the necessary foods. This is not true today, and it is the malnourished chicken which falls a prey to parasites."

The elimination of parasites in poultry should be of especial significance to the farm wife, points out Dr. Cram.

"Farm wives always depend on poultry products as an extra source of income," she said. "And when the egg production is cut down, when the chickens are feeble and weigh less, the farm wife's pocketbook suffers. Also, she depends upon her chickens to furnish many important and necessary foods."

Feminine Addition Steps Into Politics

The latest woman to venture into political waters is Mrs. Frances Ruskin, of New York City. She aspires to the State Senate and will run in the primaries.

Mrs. Ruskin, who is the wife of an eye and throat specialist, a lawyer who has never practiced, and the mother of two small children, thinks it ridiculous that motherhood should interfere with a woman's civic duties.

"Isn't it silly to do everything you can at home to make your children happy, and then turn them loose in a world that's badly run?" she asks. "To state that, our public officers should never have to make a living for their families—then they wouldn't be so easy to reach with graft."

"Ever since I discovered how badly things were run I have always wanted to get into politics," she says. "After all, running a community should be just a good job of housekeeping."

Wives Veto Big Dinners, Thrashers Carry Lunch

Racine, Wis., Aug. 28 (Sp.).—The old custom of serving dinner to throngs of hungry thrashers has been labeled as archaic here as the farm women who formerly bore the burden of preparing the harvest-time meals revolt.

Bring your own food, they say to the thrashers, and point out that baking four kinds of cake, several pies and preparing mounds of meat and vegetables is not the hot weather program of the new type of country wife.

Dr. Eloise Cram's great ambition is to reduce the infant mortality among baby chicks. She is in charge of the work on poultry parasites in the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, and has done important work tracing the life cycles of poultry parasites.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Husband, Job Restored, Pleads for Wife He Sent Away.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: A year ago, broken in spirit and discouraged because I hadn't had a job for months, I persuaded my wife to leave me and return to her parents' home in the Middle West, taking our little boy with her. I told her it was a failure and didn't have enough self-respect or fighting spirit left to go on with our marriage. It hurt her pride terribly to have to go, but she went.

Now I have a job and want her to come back. But she won't come. She says she is through with me; that she has suffered enough at my hands. I have told her I learned my bitter lesson, and that no matter what misfortune the future might bring, I would insist on us sticking together through them. She has filed papers for divorce on grounds of cruelty and desertion. Is there anything I could say to persuade her to return to me and give me another chance?

DESPERATE.

Plead Your Cause.

DEAR DESPERATE: It's going to take action, not words, to convince your wife you will never again forsake her in spirit and in actuality, as you did. I would insist on us sticking together through them. You made two almost fatal mistakes: You destroyed her faith in your willingness and ability to protect her from the world, come what may; and in sending her back to her own people, you not only, as you say, struck a terrific blow to her pride, but you sent her into an atmosphere that must have been completely hostile to you, considering the circumstances. Her family must have felt, and expressed, bitter contempt for your confessed failure. No failure is a complete failure until it stands self-confessed.

You will, I believe, have to bring your family around to your point of view before you can hope to persuade her that you are a different and a braver man, who will never again cut and run at the sight of the wolf at the door.

As a first test of your tardily developed moral courage, I suggest you arrange a short leave of absence from your work and go to see your wife at her parents' home. Talk the whole thing out with her family and with her. Put your cards on the table. If you are in deadly earnest, they can not but be convinced. And if there is any lingering spark of love in her heart for you, I believe she will give you one more chance.

To have you come for her and plead with her family for a renewal of confidence should do much to assuage her hurt pride. It will, at least, by a forthright manifestation of manliness and you have need to display a great deal of that quality in the present situation.

Centenarians Fail to Agree On Merits of Modern Cooking

CENTENARIANS can't agree on the respective virtues of old-fashioned cooking and modern, according to a survey conducted by the Modern Kitchen Congress, to be held September 10, 11, and 12.

The oldest person questioned was definitely pro-modern as regards kitchen methods. He's "Uncle" William Butler, a former slave of Nashville, Ga., whose age is reported as 122.

Roswell C. Curtis, 101, Batavia, N. Y., feels the same.

"Would I go back to the old-fashioned way? No; a thousand times,

Paris Display Makes Much Of Paillettes

Largest Ever Worn There Shown on Frocks by Lucile Paray.

PARIS—Nickel-sized paillettes—the largest Paris has used en masse—were launched as something new to fashion's late afternoon and evening frocks when Lucile Paray displayed her winter collection.

One evening gown cut on sinuous "mermaid" lines was covered with big, shimmering scales the size of a nickel in a new purple-black shade called "tulip noir" (black tulip).

A formal afternoon frock designed with a knee-length tunic was made of similar paillettes in black.

Smaller sequins—though even these were larger than those ordinarily used—added a shimmering touch to other evening costumes.

Silver With Black.

A black velvet gown fashioned on the slender silhouette seen so often this season was topped by a jacket of brilliant silver sequins which buttoned in the back, and another frock with a halter decollete in front and a very low back was made entirely of glistening black sequins.

"Black tulip," the subtle shade recalling luscious hothouse grapes, was repeated again and again in both afternoon and evening frocks often lightened by a touch of bristling green like that of a stem.

A coat of black tulip wool colored in fox dyed the same shade was worn with a matching frock of artificial silk resembling wolf finished with a girdle of green velvet tied to fall in long tails at left front. A cocktail frock of black tulip artificial silk was finished with a similar belt of stem green and an evening gown in the same shade of lace had stem green ribbons threaded under the cape decollete and falling in long streamers down the back of the skirt.

"Grand Dame" Coat.

The evening wraps which accompanied black velvet and lace evening gowns—also a feature of the collection—were colorful and elegant in design. One full-length coat of shimmering gunmetal lame had a fitted waistline and a full lower skirt giving it a "grand dame" air.

A floor-length black velvet evening wrap was trimmed with white foxes coiled about the throat and shoulders, and a dashing seven-eighths-length cape of brilliant red velvet was worn thrown back over the shoulders to reveal the black frock beneath.

Third of Crop Augurs High Cranberry Prices

Hammonton, N. J., Aug. 28 (Sp.).—A cranberry shortage that will affect the price of Christmas and Thanksgiving dinners is forecast here. Growers, after meeting at Waldo, 12 miles northeast of here, made computations and prophesied a crop one-third the size of last year's.

Although prices on Jersey berries will soar, a number of growers are facing bankruptcy as a result of the shortage.

no. Give me progression!" he maintained vehemently.

Equally scornful, but on the other side of the question, is Jane Thorne, 107, of Dover, N. J. She came out flat-footedly with "old-fashioned cooking can never be surpassed."

"I think people were more healthy than they are now," declared Mrs. Mary Ann Blanton, 118, Bonne Terre, Mo., in her stand for the old methods of kitchen activity.

"Don't tell me about the old-fashioned ways of cooking! Food is 100 per cent better today than it was when I was young." Is the view of Miss Mary Ellen Logan, 100, Brooklyn, N. Y.

PILLAR To POST

Mrs. Ross Keeps Things Running Smoothly Over At the Mint.

THE President's order nationalizing monetary silver and the demand of the banks for new coin, has not strained Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross' diplomacy in dealing with superintendents under her command. Although every mint and assay office in the United States is operating to the limit of capacity. Some are working 24 hours a day, and they are busier than they ever have been before in history.

"It has been a severe test of loyalty and fortitude," said Mrs. Ross. "The whole organization is working long hours week in and week out, and no man among them has put in a complaint. Their spirit has been superb under these challenging conditions."

If things are going smoothly for the Director of the Mint it is not surprising. She was the only girl in a large family, and she ruled her brothers with a gloved hand. After she married, her husband affirmed that her brothers had not succeeded in spoiling her, and he tried hard to spoil her, too. She was made Governor of Wyoming, filling the place of her husband often lightened by a touch of bristling green like that of a stem.

A State organization that was largely masculine.

Mrs. Ross never makes a point of her authority over men, knowing full well their natural resentment against a woman giving orders. She is the anti-thesis of the hard-boiled woman executive who thinks she must be brusque to accomplish anything. She tells her subordinates what she wants done with the utmost tact, and with no feeling of arrogance. She engages their cooperation in the same tone of voice that she would use in a drawing room, away from her office. She's positive when occasion demands, and she has stepped in, changed and regulated whole departments under her supervision as Director of the Mint—even the technical ones. The gloved hand.

Mrs. Ross' femininity has always been a political asset to her, for both men and women have succumbed to her good looks and charm, that is backed up with a dash of feminine clothes, too. The other day she had on one of those new plaid wool dresses (it was a cool day) and it fitted her slender figure very well and was most becoming. And she has another distinctly feminine trait. She is afraid of mice and rats. At night the old Treasury Building is the playground for some large rats, and whenever Mrs. Ross has to go down those dark halls at night she is in agony.

Wife of Lafayette Little Known Here

Was Staunch Upholder of American Rights.

New York, Aug. 28 (Sp.).—"I thought he was a bachelor," said the Metropolitan Museum of Art curator of the Marquis de Lafayette, indicating the obscurity to which the American people have relegated the general's wife, a staunch fighter for American freedom.

The 177th anniversary of the birth of Lafayette will fall on September 6. A fête will be held in the Tuileries. A pilgrimage of the American Friends of Lafayette will be conducted over the country of the Lafayettes. Much elaborate preparation is going into these ceremonies. But there will be no honor due to the memory of Mme. Lafayette.

Various articles about her have been offered magazines. All have been refused on the grounds that no one in America knows enough about her.

Lane Colony Why Women Want to Boss Men Fries Its Fish, Envyng None Leaves Mlle. Delza Lost in Riddle

Drowsy Summer Day Ends With Pleasure Fight Among Pets.

By Patti Elliott.

WASHINGTON'S own wood thrush sings its drowsy "Come to Me," and water spouting from garden hoses, falls with a soft patter on neatly-clipped plots of grass, on zinnias, scarlet sage and tall, gay nodding flowers. Five o'clock on a summer afternoon. There is a lull and a silence down the typical Washington suburban lane. This is the day's lowest ebb of activity.

Almost, as in answer to a signal, out of the vine-covered porches come little maids in fresh dresses, their hair smoothly brushed, and little lads in short-sleeved shirts and abbreviated trousers. Young America, after a hard day of play, has dressed for the evening. Soon up and down the lane there is a whirl of wheels, a tramp of feet as the young brigade springs upon tricycles and kiddie cars or joins in the games of jumping rope.

Impressed Labor.

Click! click! click! goes a lawn mower pushed impatiently by a lad who views the world with a pout and measures the countless blades of grass yet to be cut. "Oh, Billee! Oh, Billee!" shrills a boy on a bicycle, bringing a swift, boyish smile to the young mower's face.

Grandmothers step out to take a look at the gardens; snip a dead leaf or fading blossom to make more room. Pretty housewives in summer dresses stroll about searching for flowers for the dinner tables.

From the glass-enclosed kitchens twinkling in the late afternoon light arises the aroma of fish frying. Neighbor Lowery has played hooky from court and brought back a haul from Chesapeake Bay. Everyone is too polite to ask if by steel hook or silver bait. Anyway he is generous and all along the lane "fish for dinner" is the watchword.

Time for daddy to come home. Eager, youthful faces and older womanly ones keep watch on both ends of the lane.

"Here comes daddy's car!" "Hurrah! Hurrah! He brought us something." "Don't climb on the running board. That child will be hurt." "Bowl! bowl! bowl! yip yip." All the dogs in the lane form a welcoming committee for everybody's daddy.

Half a Garden For a Dog.

A cry of dismay: "Oh, look, he has pulled up another flower!" The whole Lane Community watches while the damage to a garden by a frisky little black dog is examined. "Oh, well, one must have a dog, and one must be philosophical. Either a whole garden and no dog or a dog and 50 per cent of a garden."

The sound of a hoe, swung with gusto, is heard in the distance. The general is home and is working in his garden in shirt sleeves and with sweat on his brow, a relief from the daily planning of war games.

Clip! clip! some one is cutting the garden hedge of the home occupied by those two unmarried ladies. The spick and span appearance of the Lane must be kept up.

"Growl-gr-gr-gr." The air is cut with the sound of a real dog fight. Two police dogs engage the Lane arena. The Lane quickly fills with spectators.

Dinner Is Served.

Mrs. Dog Owner strides in the midst of the battle. "The hose is not long enough." "There, the owner of the young police dog is bitten. I was afraid of that."

At last it is over and, ashamed, the dogs, big and little, obey commands to remain in the confines of their gardens.

A Chinese gong sounds from one house, a mellow ship's bell note comes from another, a silvery set of chimes plays a tune in another, and a loud bell clangs from still another. A stand butler appears in a garden. "Dinner is served," he announces. "Dinner is ready! Dinner is ready!"

A rush of small feet, the more leisurely turning away by elders from gardens or a freshly cleaned motor car. A breaking up of the little groups on porches or garden seats. For an hour, at least, the Lane is quiet once more.

French Can't Understand American Sisters, Singer Says.

By Frances Mangum.

MADAMOISELLE LUCIE DELZA is a concert singer. But before that she is a Frenchwoman.

And as a Frenchwoman she admires American women but finds them very hard to understand. "They know so much about everything," she said yesterday, "but they know so little about men!"

"Your American men find Frenchwomen very attractive, yes? It is because French women make them, what you say, boss, and they like that. American women want to be boss themselves. Frenchwomen do not. They know they are the weaker sex and they want a man to look after them. They make him very happy, and tell him he is wonderful. American women do not do that!"

Clubs Without Men? Oh, No!

Mademoiselle Delza has just returned from a concert tour through France and Northern Africa. She says she is very glad to be in this country because she enjoys studying American women.

"They are so different!" She spoke feelingly as French women do and her eyes shot very French sparks. "We can not understand over

Modern Conditions Destroy Bird Life

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 28 (Sp.).—Cruel persons who delight in killing birds, modern civilization and a lack of education regarding birds are held responsible for the rapidly dwindling number of birds by Harry L. Rhodes, well-known "bird man" here. He maintains bird life has fallen 75 per cent in the last century.

Mr. Rhodes is making his own effort to restore bird population. Around his house he has placed many bird houses. In his garden he offers a free lunch of millet, hemp, kafir corn, other bird seeds and fruit.

Mr. Rhodes is partial to robins. "The robin comes the nearest to being 'just folks,'" he says. "Always one of the first birds to arrive in the spring, he remains all summer and is one of the last to depart at the approach of winter."

When the Pilgrim Fathers stepped from the Mayflower their first glimpse of bird life was called a robin, observed Mr. Rhodes.

Foal Named for Ishbel Prize Exhibit in Canada

Windsor, N. S., Aug. 28 (Sp.).—A foal born while the British Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and his daughter, Ishbel, were visiting here has been named after Miss Ishbel.

The equine Ishbel has been shipped to Halifax with her mother, where their owner hopes to obtain the blue ribbon in the "brood mare with foal" class in the provincial exhibits, according to the Canadian press.

Visitor Finds Knowledge Keen Except on Managing Men.

By Frances Mangum.

so well with the eyes," she declared. "So we make our eyes beautiful as we know how. We use mascara and eyeshadow, and we are very careful that they are dressed up!"

"American women really make-up more than French women. They use more powder and more rouge. Or," she said on second thought, "they use them more conspicuously. But they do not make up the eyes half so much. Perhaps that is because they do not talk with them!"

Mlle. Delza explained that Frenchwomen are so painstaking in making themselves attractive to men because they "have to be."

The Way to Manage Men.

"There is no other way," she said, "that we can manage men except by being attractive. We would not tell our husbands or our lovers to do as we say. We tell them we do as they say. But if we want something very badly we are very, very nice to them and then they want to do as we wish. If a woman is dumb she can not do this, but if she is clever she can do so much."

"American women are direct. We are indirect. That is the difference. And perhaps neither way is best, absolutely, but men like the indirect, so we are that."

"The more we please a man, the cleverer we are, and the happier he is, and better we all are!" Mademoiselle laughed gaily.

She said she had often heard women in this country refer to the French woman's chic.

The Secret of Chic.

"It is really nothing," she explained, "except the French woman's individuality. One reads so much about French style. In reality the Frenchwomen have no better clothes than American women. They are simply more individual. Here you buy a dress you like and you do not care how many other people wear the same kind of dress. In France we do not do that. If we buy a dress and there is another like it, we change ours so it is different. When books say everybody is wearing this or that we stop and we wear something else."

Mlle. Delza offered her hat for an example. "It had a three-cornered shape," she said, "but now I see where so many will wear the tricorné and I pin up my brim so it has no corners at all."

"Even in perfume we like to be different. We buy one or two perfumes, maybe more, and we blend them to suit ourselves."

"It is because of this individuality that men do not think of us as a whole, but always as separate beings!" she said.

Their Eyes Talk Well.

Mlle. Delza admitted that French women were very eloquent in eye language.

"We believe that you say so much

Salve Helps To Free Eyes Of Wrinkles

Oil Application Offered for Halting Tell-Tale Marks of Age.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A WOMAN MAY be only as old as she looks, but her eyes are only as young as the skin that surrounds them. The years are numbered by the maze of fine creases in the lids and the network of wrinkles in the corners. Sometimes these creases play mean tricks on a young woman by appearing prematurely. But whether they come early or late, they're sure to come eventually unless ward off by scientific means.

Science, in combating such defects, searches for the cause first, and prevents the effect by removing the cause. A beautician and several chemists started out several years ago to find out how to rid the eyes of surrounding wrinkles. They found these age marks came from lack of oil, and subsequent breaking down of tissues. After hundreds of experiments they discovered a lubricating oil that would be absorbed by the skin, and thereby, it is claimed, correct wrinkling. Because the oil is so strong they compounded it into a cream mild enough to treat the finest areas of skin.

Besides counteracting wrinkles, it is also recommended for use around tired eyes, and is said to relax and refresh them quickly.

Younger women may benefit by using it to prevent wrinkling and lines that have a tendency to turn into premature wrinkles.

Bargain in Boys' Shirts.

Parents already on the lookout for school tags are keeping a weather eye open for bargains. It would be deplorable were they to miss an exceptional offer now made by a local store.

Junior shirts for boys from 8 to 12, prep shirts, 12½ to 14½ necks, and button-on blouses for boys from 5 to 10, are on sale this week for 88 cents, three for $2.50, and six for $5. Ordinarily this same merchandise sells for $1.19 to $1.50.

The shirts are made of fine broadcloth and madras in fancy woven patterns, plain whites, plain colors and all-white novelty weaves. There are these features which should be noted: 1. Every shirt is fully shrunk. 2. Inverted pleat backs. 3. Pleats and placket on sleeves. 4. Welt pockets. 5. Ocean pearl buttons. 6. Button-on blouses are made extra length.

Fits Out, Price Down.

When a factory discontinues a product, stocks remaining on the market immediately drop in price. There is the case of a pen and pencil set with 14-carat gold point and trimmings. A shortage of pens and pencils dug deep in their pockets and paid $3 for it. Now, because no more are being turned out, it is theirs for $2.95. The company gives it an absolute guarantee.

Now that the sun is giving Washingtonians less of a beating, and breezes are bringing a suggestion of fall, those who have hibernated in frigidaires and air-cooled cubby holes are peeping out at the thermometer. Some of the less timid ones will soon come boldly forth and prepare for winter sports. A favorite is ping pong.

It can be played in a reasonably warm room. Ping pongers looking over last year's set are likely to find balls dented, rackets warped and the net stretched out of plumb. But a snap of the fingers, why should they care? A set, including four rackets, eight balls and a net, can be had for $3.50. Or they can look further and find many sorts of sets ranging from $1.98 to $4.25.

Basement Bargain Hunt.

It sometimes pays to go bargain hunting in the basement store. There might be much that you wouldn't have, but frequently a prize can be found that costs hardly anything at all.

A recent exploration in these underground regions revealed a variety of suits, most extraordinary for the cost. Each one included a fur-trimmed full-length coat and a matching skirt. These were those with the Peter Pan beaverette collars, yoke back and gilet cuffs; those with criss-cross collars, mar-trimmed, and others with stand-up collars plus beaverette revers. Some have belts all the way, and some have none.

Florentine Novelties.

A number of Florentine novelties are attracting those who are looking for gifts, or little hand-me-outs for themselves. It scarcely matters whether they want a tray, a box, a coaster, or sweetmeat dish they can find it among this new assortment from 25 cents to $1.

Individual cocktail trays, elongated in shape, and large enough for a cocktail or highball, and hors d'oeuvres are 25 cents apiece.

A large square tray with four coasters is 50 cents. These are waterproof—and what's equally important now—alcohol proof.

The sweetmeat dishes are proving general favorites. These consist of an inside china dish divided into several sections and gaily painted in a variety of colors and an outside Florentine box. These come in two sizes at two prices.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 106, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Leather, Kidskin, Lambskin, Capeskin and Suede Afford Variety in Offerings; Worn Under or Over Sleeves of Fall Outfits.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—It's an old saying that "the good die young." But it certainly isn't true of fashion in general, nor of gloves in particular. For what better glove fashion has there ever been than the one of the plain slip-on of four or five button length? And that is just as much alive for this fall and winter as it was four and five years ago.

clothes, with sports clothes, even with some of your dressier costumes.

And in any of those materials or any of those ways you wear it, you'll be smart and in fashion. Because simplicity is in fashion. And these simple gloves harmonize with the simplicity of the costume.

But you don't have to wear it to be smart. Which should be good news for many women.

That wasn't true a few years ago. Then the well-dressed woman would wear nothing else. And, most always the glove was beige, remember?

Now very few of them are beige because dark accessories are the fashion. And that makes black or brown gloves the thing.

But now there are other gloves to choose from, anyway. Gloves with a little bit of neat, tailored decoration on them. And they look particularly well with these fall costumes because costumes have so little decoration on them that often a decorated glove just sets them up. The idea of contrast and accent, you know.

Fancy Cuffs Are Wider.

These decorated gloves usually have a somewhat wider cuff than the plain glove. That's because they're always supposed to be worn over the coat sleeve. Otherwise the decoration wouldn't decorate.

Just rows of stitching is one of the best kinds of decoration to look for. Tucks are fine, too, and so are other such simple, dainty "dress-maker" touches.

This idea of a bit of decoration goes right on into sports gloves, too, where the hand-sewn glove does the trick. Brown or white, in dole skin or capeskin and natural-color pigskin are fashion's favorites for these.

Book Explains Care of Baby

Violet Kelway Libby Is Author of Hints for Mothers.

THE young mother caring for her first baby finds herself up against many problems that neither instinct nor her physician have taught her to solve. For instance: How shall she lift and carry him? What is the technique of handling him when she bathes him? How shall she travel with him on a Pullman or in a motor car?

These questions and many others are answered by a Washington woman, Violet Kelway Libby, in a small volume entitled "How to Care for the Baby."

Mrs. Libby, who is the mother of three children, wrote the book out of her own experience, and in it she incorporates many helpful suggestions given by family physicians, by specialists and mothers.

"Babies are not medical problems," says Mrs. Libby. "Caring for them should be a cheerful and enjoyable experience."

The hints in the book, all extremely practical and presented in simple nontechnical language, cover problems that arise during the first years of the baby's life.

In her discussion of how to travel with a baby Mrs. Libby points out that the airplane is a method of transportation not to be neglected. Quick transit may eliminate many problems that the mother otherwise meets in taking a baby on a long journey. For automobile travel, Mrs. Libby suggests a small hammock for the baby to sleep in. For train travel a large basket makes a comfortable bed for a small baby.

The book is attractively bound in pink and blue and is published by the Plymouth Press.

Tasty Chicken Dishes Fill That Hot-to-Cold Weather Gap.

By Susan Mills.

NEED some extra chicken recipes? Here are a few that will fill that fall gap between hot and really hot weather. Chicken is delicious at this time of the year, isn't it?

Chicken Rice Loaf.

1 cup peas or asparagus tips
2 cups cooked rice
2 eggs
¼ cup milk
Salt and pepper

Combine the rice, chicken and peas or asparagus. Beat eggs, add milk and seasonings. Pour over rice mixture and blend. Put into buttered pan, set into a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) about 45 minutes, or until loaf is set.

For daintier appetites pineapple chicken is fine. It may be served in timbale cases, in croustades, on rusks or on toast.

Pineapple Chicken.

1½ cups cold cooked chicken
1¼ cups medium white sauce
Timbale cases, toast or croustades.
Drain the pineapple tidbits. Put six of them aside and combine the remainder with the chicken and white sauce, heating in the top of the double boiler. Fill the timbale mixture into warm timbale cases or put on hot toast. Garnish each serving with a tidbit surrounded with parsley.

For daintier appetites of all chicken puffs royal are pleasantly satisfying. If there are enough of them, they will satisfy hearty appetites, too.

Chicken Puffs Royal.

1 cup ground chicken
4 egg whites, beaten stiff
¼ teaspoon pepper
4 egg yolks, beaten
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon celery salt

Combine the meat, egg yolks and seasonings. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and drop by spoonfuls into hot fat (380 degrees F.) and cook until brown. Drain on brown paper and serve at once.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Erysipelas.

ERYSIPELAS has been known for centuries and was sometimes referred to during the Middle Ages as St. Anthony's fire. It is a fairly common disease and is encountered in all parts of the world. Its contagious character was early recognized and Tronseau, a French physician, records an instance of its transmission to a nurse by the disease to 15 other persons. In the United States erysipelas is responsible for nearly as many deaths as scarlet fever.

The cause of the disease lies at the door of any one of several strains of the streptococcus in erysipelas of the skin. It is generally agreed that some slight wound must precede the infection.

Facial erysipelas may begin on the nose, and in such cases it will usually be found that the patient has had a cold or that a tiny sore just inside or near the nostrils has existed.

How It's Transferred.

The common but pernicious practice of fondling the face with the fingers, touching the nose, or lips, or rubbing the face, is probably responsible for slight wounds of the skin caused by the finger nails and is accompanied by the transfer of streptococci from the nose or mouth.

Occasionally erysipelas begins on other parts of the body, such as the feet and legs, or about the nipples. In such cases the patient will usually be found to be a streptococcus carrier.

The disease generally begins with a chill, followed by a high fever, the characteristic reddening and swelling of the skin not being visible for perhaps 24 hours. In facial erysipelas the redness and swelling of the skin extend rapidly on the cheek and over the bridge of the nose to the opposite side, sometimes giving the appearance of a huge red butterfly. Because of the swelling the eyes can not be opened and the features are much distorted.

Acute erysipelas lasts, as a rule, from ten days to two weeks. Occasionally there will be a relapse following apparent recovery. The disease ceases only when the streptococci lose their battle with the defenses of the body.

How It Is Treated.

The treatment consists in remedies that will diminish pain, limit the swelling, and conserve the patient's resistance. Ice and saturated solutions of magnesium sulphate have been found useful. Within the last few years ultra-violet light has been strongly recommended as an ideal type of treatment. Reports on the use of light therapy show recoveries in about the same percentage as with other forms of treatment.

Convalescent serum—that is, serum from the blood of patients who have recovered from the disease—has been used with some success. In one rather long series in which convalescent serum was used the mortality rate was considerably lower than the average. In Bellevue Hospital more than 15,000 cases of erysipelas have been treated in a period of a little more than 20 years. Nearly 3,000 of these cases were treated by means of an antitoxin, and as a result the mortality rate was reduced approximately 3 per cent.

Erysipelas must not be regarded lightly, as the infection, particularly in older persons, is attended with considerable danger. Small sores about the face should not be touched or rubbed.

HONEYMOON MOUNTAIN by Frances Shelley Wees

Deborah's grandfather tied up her fortune so that she could not make the mistake her mother did and elope with a stranger. By the will she must marry the son of Courtney Graham, whom her mother flitted. But the youth is not the man his father was; he wants only Deborah's money. To prevent the marriage, and disaster to Deborah, a wealthy young man named Bryn marries her; the two of them agree to let her grandmother believe that Bryn is actually Stuart Graham. The young couple, married on the Coast, go to live on grandmother's lonely mountain ranch. Bryn solves a ticklish situation by sending for servants.

GRANDMOTHER was waiting in the car. She had been sitting there ever since Bryn had parked the car drawn back into the smallest possible corner in the corner of the seat, her eyes wide and excited.

"Now," he said, with a foot on the running board, "how would you like to come out and stroll down the street, Grandmother? Nothing shall happen to you."

"I—I don't think I would be afraid," she said haltingly. Bryn came to a sudden decision. "Will you do me a tremendous favor?"

"Certainly, my boy."

"Do you mind calling me by the name I've always been called? Al—most nobody has ever used the name Stuart. Could you bring yourself to call me Bryn?"

"Bryn?" she repeated. "It's very strange. You know, my boy, it suits you, somehow. Stuart doesn't. I always felt queer saying it. Bryn."

"Thank you, Grandmother. You must tell Deborah, too. She calls you Stuart. And now, I think perhaps I won't come out of the car, if you don't mind. I've been noticing the . . . well, the hats. Mine is not exactly right. I am afraid we might be conspicuous."

"And?" Bryn inquired.

He opened the door wider, and waited. She gave a little fluttering breath and emerged slowly from her long retreat.

A bonny girl in a one-piece silk dress with nothing underneath it, with no sleeves, with bare legs and brown feet carefully thrust into dirty white sandals, strolled past him. Grandmother gave her one horrified look and clutched at Bryn's arm. She turned her face away, scornfully from the girl. But her glance fell on an open sport car sailing past with four young people in it, one girl sitting on a boy's lap with her arm light around his neck and her cheek against his forehead. She turned away.

They walked on slowly. After a while, Grandmother became calmer. She began to adjust herself.

A Hat for Grandmother.

Together they saw the hat in the window. On a pedestal in the center was one hat, a molded toque of gray velvet the exact shade of Grandmother's hair. Bryn felt her hand move on his arm. He looked at the hat and then down at her face. She lifted her eyes slowly, and they met his, and there was an entirely new expression on her face. Resignation began slowly to relinquish its hold before the onslaught of desire. He turned, slowly, without a word, and they went into the little shop.

"The hat in the window, please," he told the attendant. It was like a ritual which must be carried out without a word. Grandmother put up trembling hands and lifted off Deborah's black hat. She touched her hair ineffectually. The girl put the soft gray toque on the silver-haired Grandmother, startled, looked at herself in the glass and then turned to Bryn. Her eyes were deep blue and shining; her cheeks were pink.

"We will take it," he told the girl, and handed her a bill. She made change and then picked up the black hat gingerly.

"Do you want to take this?" she inquired.

Flushing, she put it carefully into a bag and handed it to Bryn. He led Grandmother out.

"And now," he said happily, "now let's go shopping."

Grandmother was a little intoxicated. She made no protests whatever. He brought her a long soft gray woolen coat. He took her to a florist's and bought her a bunch of purple, scented violets to pin on the new coat. He bought her five pairs of gray gloves and a gray suede purse to match. Grandmother, by the time they were through, was 20 years younger, and the pain in her heart had entirely disappeared.

"I've got one or two more things to buy," he decided, and went into a confectioner's. Grandmother accompanied him and stood waiting.

"I want Bryn to tell the proprietor, 'a very nice box of chocolates.'"

He went to the back of the shop and returned with a box of exquisite proportions, covered with white parchment, tied with silver ribbon.

They Buy a Dog.

The articles were selected and paid for. Bryn carried them himself back to the car and put them in the trunk with the groceries and magazines. He placed Grandmother carefully in the seat and got in himself.

"Well," he inquired, "do you think we've missed anything?"

Grandmother touched her violets. "I don't know what it could be," she said mistily.

Bryn sat for a moment, his hand on the knob of the gear lever, considering.

On the sidewalk in front of the car a small boy in clean faded blue overalls came slowly along with a very small dog on the end of a leash. The dog shone like silk in the late afternoon sun.

The boy's eye caught Bryn. He called out. "You don't want to buy a good dog, do you mister?"

Bryn got out of the car again, surveying the puppy in question.

"What is it, a cocker spaniel?"

Garment Strike Hinges on Pay And Hour Rule

Union Leaders Plan Move to Enforce Order of Roosevelt.

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—The possibility of a strike in the cotton garment industry to enforce the order of President Roosevelt cutting hours and raising wages was brought forth today by trade unionists as an answer to the manufacturers' resolution of refusal to abide by the White House order.

Jacob S. Potofsky, vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union—whose president, Sidney Hillman, is a member of the Labor Advisory Board of the NRA—said the general boards of his union and of the International Ladies' Garment Workers would meet within a week in New York to decide on a policy of joint action.

"The Amalgamated," Potofsky said, "will do everything under the sun to enforce the President's order. This order cutting hours and raising wages was arrived at by the Administration after careful study and consideration."

Dubinsky States Position.

The position of the International Ladies' Garment Workers was stated by David Dubinsky, its president.

"If they (the manufacturers) defy the Government we will enforce the order. We can, even with a general strike. But I am confident the Government will enforce the order."

These two unions are among the strongest in organized labor. Dr. Leo Wolman, for years a counselor of the Amalgamated, was drafted at the outset of the NRA for a post on the Labor Advisory Board, aided in formulating policies and now is on the Automobile Labor Relations Board.

The President's order lowered hours and increased wages of some 250,000 workers in the cotton garment industry. It was declared effective October 1, and manufacturers have until September 5 to file protests in Washington.

Manufacturers Protest.

The massed protest of manufacturers, in a resolution voicing refusal to abide by the order, placed the question directly up to the President.

Col. R. B. Paddock, executive director of the cotton garment code authority, was designated by the manufacturers to call on the President and explain the industry's attitude in more detail.

Paddock awaited an opportunity to visit the President at the Hyde Park "summer White House."

The manufacturers authorized Raymond F. Walsh, their counsel, to fight the case, even to the courts, if necessary.

Woman Would Sever Marriage Third Time

Fort Scott, Kans., Aug. 28 (AP).—Mrs. Anthony Schellert has decided after three marriages to the same man—and two previous divorces—that marital ties between them should be severed for the third time.

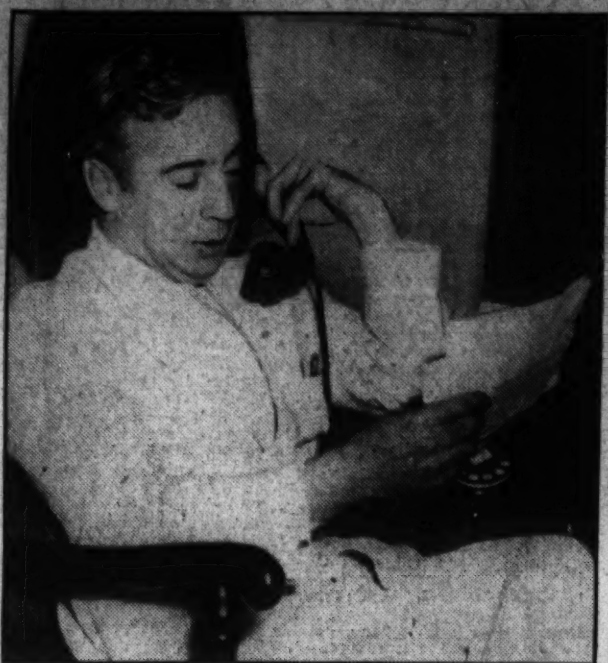

In her latest suit she charges that her husband abandoned her for the third time. Her two previous divorces were granted after similar charges had been filed.

1,500 Truck Drivers Ballot Peacefully

Minneapolis, Aug. 28 (AP).—Smiling and joking, 1,500 truck drivers balloted today to determine who should represent them in negotiations with employers concerning collective bargaining.

In direct contrast to the scenes of the two recent truck drivers strikes, in which six men were killed and scores injured in rioting and encounters with police, today's proceedings were orderly.

Leader Maps Textile Strike

Associated Press Photo. Francis J. Gorman, head of the textile strike committee, is shown communicating with field representatives on the cotton strike as the Friday night deadline on the strike nears. A general walkout, to include silk, woollen and rayon workers also, is "highly possible," according to Gorman.

loads to control abuses under the stretch-out system (involving operation of an unusually large number of machines by workers).

2. Establishment of a six-hour day and five-day week without reduction in pay.

3. Reinstatement of all workers discharged for union activity.

4. Recognition of the United Textile Workers as the bargaining agency for textile labor.

5. Establishment of an arbitration tribunal to settle all disputes between capital and labor in the industry.

Charges Unjust Dismissals.

Gorman made public a letter to Garrison in which he protested that employers had overloaded operators with work to cut production costs and that employers sought to make the NRA minimum wages rates the maximum. He insisted hundreds of union members had been discharged in violation of Section 7(a), the collective bargaining clause, of the recovery act.

Gorman predicted the Labor Department and the labor board would clear the way for distribution of Federal relief to the strikers by declaring the walkout justified. He said in some instances the Federal relief probably would exceed the workers' normal weekly pay.

Thousands of posters were distributed throughout the textile area by the union. They bore such inscriptions as "Textile workers, get ready," "Kill the stretch-out," and "Labor is for the NRA. Where do the bosses stand?"

W. B. Watson, secretary of the strike committee, returned from a Southern inspection trip and reported the workers "see an end to their exploitation."

2 of Train Crew Killed As Freight Leaves Rails

Greenville, S. C., Aug. 28 (AP).—A railroad fill, undermined by heavy rains near Piedmont, sent a Southern Railway freight train into a small branch early today, bringing death to two crew members and serious injuries to a third.

Elvin Neece, of Columbia, fireman, and Henry Parks, of Greenville, a Negro brakeman, were instantly killed, and R. C. Carter, of Greenwood, engineer, was badly hurt.

cation before he left England of any intention of becoming engaged. The Prince of Wales, now holidaying at Biarritz, was one of the first to be let into the secret, it was said.

It was understood that no plans whatsoever have yet been made for the marriage.

Before the ceremony can occur the King must give his formal consent by an order in council under the terms of the royal personages' marriage act.

Recent dispatches from Vienna following Prince George's visit to King Alexander of Yugoslavia at Bled; Yugoslavia, reported that the marriage of the English prince and Greek princess was being arranged.

The actual negotiation was said to have been assigned to Prince Paul, nephew of Alexander and regarded as very close to the King. A graduate of Oxford, Paul speaks English fluently.

The princess, who was educated in Athens, Paris and London, speaks fluent French, English, Greek, Russian and German, and is talented in music and painting.

She inherited all the beauty and charm of her Russian mother and the passing personal qualities of her father, who was a brother of the late King Constantine of Greece.

Legionnaires said the notice to leave becomes effective 24 hours after its receipt.

Nazis Offer Wool From Wood To Frauleins as Imports Fail

Fashions Reflect First Sign of Germany's Battle With Economics.

Berlin, Aug. 28 (AP).—Nazis today trained their first gun in the big battle with lack of raw materials on frau and fraulein Germany's fashions.

As imports of wool were increasingly restricted by the shortage of foreign exchange, survey of Berlin's style authorities and textile experts showed that women—and men, as well—are beginning to wear the so-called "wool cloth" derived from what Nazi chemists call "liquefied wood."

The new substitute for wool, German science's initial answer to the shortage of commodities produced abroad, has been officially named "woolstra" and, it was said, has properties of warmth, strength and pleasing appearance—practically equal to those of real wool.

Richard Dillenz, director of the Reich Institute of Fashion, claimed further that "woolstra" resembles strikingly the product of the sheep's back.

While Dillenz insisted that "German women can still wear all the pleats and frills they desire" and that "Germany has sufficient supplies of raw materials and textiles to last through the winter," he nevertheless admitted that necessity is dictating the production of artificial wool, silk and linen.

The new "woolstra" textiles represent years of effort on the part of German textile experts since World War days, when paper suits were in vogue.

In some cases wool thread from discarded garments is used as the base for cloth, and experts estimate that the new "woolstra" together with materials woven from old wool thread comprise some 20 per cent of all the "wool" cloth now being used by the Reich.

Ocean Fliers Land Safely in Greenland

New Rochelle, N. Y., Aug. 28 (AP).—Prof. Richard Light, of Yale, and Robert F. Wilson, 25-year-old New Rochelle youth, landed safely last night on the western coast of Greenland, according to a cable received from Dr. Light by the boy's mother here.

Mrs. Wilson said the advice did not mention the name of the town where the landing was made. It was presumed to be Julianehaab, which was the destination of the fliers when they left Cartwright, Labrador, yesterday.

Sex Opposing New Deal, G. O. P. Woman Asserts

Portland, Me., Aug. 28 (AP).—American women are rising against New Deal policies they believe dangerous to their homes and families, Mrs. Henry R. Caraway, vice president of the Women's National Republican Club of New York, said here today.

Mrs. Caraway was here to speak at rallies during the political campaign.

She expressed confidence women would register their disapproval on "an administration intoxicated with theory and blind to practical circumstances."

Colored Elks Reelect Wilson

First Prize in Oratorical Contest Awarded to D. C. Girl.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 28 (AP).—J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler of Colored Elks, was reelected by acclamation for his thirteenth term as head of the organization today at the opening of the Grand Lodge. The term of office was extended two years.

A monster parade of all branches of the order blocked traffic on Atlantic avenue this afternoon for four hours, 301 units being in line with 52 bands.

Along with the Grand Exalted Ruler Senator Hamilton F. Keane, Mayor Bacharach, Col. Arthur Little, Isaac Nutter, W. C. Huston, Perry W. Howard, Judge E. W. Henry, Dr. W. J. Thompson, and James E. Kelley, grand secretary, reviewed the parade from a stand in front of City Hall.

Betty G. Francis, Dunbar High School graduate, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John R. Francis, 1931 Second street, Washington, was awarded the first prize of $500 in the National oratorical contest held by the Education Department. She spoke on "Constitution and Citizenship."

Naming of the grand exalted ruler for two years instead of one is calculated to precipitate a lively struggle for other key offices for a similar term, which may prolong the sessions throughout the week.

Snake Dance Wins Rain for Arizona

Drought Believed Broken Throughout State.

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 28 (AP).—Arizona's drought, apparently had received a knock-out blow today.

Rains visited nearly all sections of the State during the past 24 hours, including the parched mesas of the Hopi Indians, whose snake and antelope priests had almost despaired that the annual snake dance supplication for rain had been heard by the water gods of the underworld.

Live stock men and members of the live stock sanitary commission here expressed the opinion that conditions which have caused hundreds of drought-stricken cattle to be shipped off the ranges under Government purchase probably have come to an end.

Broken Strut
Puts Yankee
Out of TrialBoston Boat Ahead by 3
Lengths When Mishap Occurs.Trials to Pick Defender of Cup to Resume
Today.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 28 (Sp.). Hard luck today forced Yankee, of Boston, leading applicant for the defense of the America's Cup, to withdraw from her third engagement of the final trials with Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow while leading her opponent by about three boat lengths.

Yankee's jumper strut, a part of the rigging which supports the top of the mast, broke and forced her to quit the contest.

The accident was a bitter disappointment to Yankee's crew, for it came after she had overcome a lead of about 500 yards and passed the Rainbow. The strut let go after the two contenders had rounded the windward 15-mile mark and were running home with spinnaker set.

Even then, she would have been all right had not the wind shifted half around the compass to convert an intended run into another beat. The broken rigging was intended only to support the mast when working to windward, and had the second leg remained a run, Yankee could have continued.

Damage Repaired.

Before Yankee had reached her mooring two of her crew in bos'n chairs were 100 feet or more aloft, repairing the damage. Her after guard were confident everything would be in readiness to resume the final trial series tomorrow.

Today's race was scheduled as a 30-mile windward leeward contest. It was sailed in a light air, and variable, which probably ranged from eight to ten knots velocity.

Yankee and Rainbow have each won a decision from the other in final trials, but Yankee remains far in the lead as a result of her long string of victories over the Vanderbilt boat in the earlier series.

Manley Carter

HorsesSir Cona Included Among 7 Hunters Bought by Northern Stable.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Aug. 28.—Manley W. Carter, widely-known horseman, has sold seven of his 8-year-old hunters to a Northern show stable for a fancy price, but has leased them from their new owner for the remainder of the present show season.

Sir Cona, his sensational champion, is in the hands of a stable, which placed above Sir Cona in the events they figured in, sweeping the Bath County Horse Show at Hot Springs recently.

The seven horses Mr. Carter sold include: Croton, a chestnut gelding, by Campfire, out of Persian Blue; Clover Top, a bay gelding, by Bostonian; Sir Cona, chestnut gelding, by Imp. Donnacora, out of Pet Bright; Sea Level, bay gelding, by Chantanooga; King Kingle, bay gelding, by Imp. Chantanooga; Soft Breeze, bay gelding, by Sun Pal, out of Loyal Lady; and Fadesless, chestnut gelding, by Gold Stick.

This group, headed by Sir Cona, has swept the shows in which they have participated this year. Sir Cona took the championship at Deep Run, Fredericksburg and Keswick, and swept all classes at Orange, where there is no championship and bowed only to his stablemate, Croton, in the Bath County show. Sir Cona took two blues in the classic Upperville show.

St. Louis, Aug. 28 (AP).—Ray Benge missed a place in baseball's hall of fame that is reserved for no-hit pitchers today when he had one bad inning. The result of that frame was a 2-0 victory for the Cardinals over Brooklyn, putting St. Louis one game behind the second-place Chicago Cubs.

Braves Blast Grimes
To Beat Pirates, 5-3

Pittsburgh, Aug. 28 (AP).—Boston's Braves rushed in three runs in the opening inning, and captured the first game of today's scheduled double bill with Pittsburgh, 5 to 3, before the weather man washed out the second contest. The teams will play a double-header tomorrow.

The Braves hammered Burleigh Grimes from the mound in the first inning and Bill Swift took up the pitching job, holding the tribe in check. He was relieved for a pinch hitter in the eighth and Hal Smith finished the task.

Familiar Thuds of Hoofbeats Heard Again at Marlboro Track

The field in close quarters rounding the first bend in the opening race at Marlboro yesterday. Despite the jam, By Surprise (third from left), the 2-1 favorite, led the field home, with Disruption (No. 5) second. Left to right, the field is: Disruption, Silvery Cloud, Junee, Canobie Lake, By Surprise, Conoria and Ghost Story.

Feature, Despite Interference.

By Walter Haight.

HISTORIC Marlboro played host to a crowd of 5,000 turf-hungry fans, the majority from Washington and nearby Maryland, as the fall racing season for this section got under way yesterday afternoon. To the tune of canned music being ground out over the loudspeaker system, the majority of those present placed their bets and then crowded the stand, the rail and the familiar hill by the sixteenth pole to cheer their choices to victory or being witness to the errors of their selections.

It was under ideal weather conditions that King Horse made his bow at Washington's front door. A warm sun and cool westerly breeze battled to a draw. Sleeveless dresses for women and shirt sleeves for men were the rule and the usual homelike racing atmosphere attained only at Marlboro was again in evidence.

Favorite Takes Feature.

Both favorite and longest-hat players had their innings as horses and jockeys battled their way through the seven-race program. The fifth race, looked upon as the feature, brought a well-earned victory to Mrs. L. Ball's Tuleyries Wand. Backed into favoritism because of two consecutive victories at Cumberland last week, Tuleyries Wand gave her backers some anxious moments being outwitted by four lengths from Benish Way which nosed out King of Hearts for the second money.

It was Benish Way which opened up a lead of several lengths which opened after the field began the 6 1/2 furlong sprint. Tuleyries Wand was running in tight quarters at the time and, with Benish Way continuing to hold the sway on the final swing for the stretch, there was little joy in "Favorite Town." However, Jockey Davis finally wiggled his mount out of the pack, sailed to the front at the sixteenth pole and had Tuleyries Wand flying by a safe margin at the finish.

Benish Way Tires.

Benish Way's pace-setting led near the end and King of Hearts came up with a rush that many believed had won the race. However, the judges had their say as there were to have it a few races later.

Wishing Star and Golden Play hooked up in a thrilling struggle in the seventh race and backers of the latter were about to run under the stands to collect when Wishing Star's No. 3 was displayed on the results board. From where he sat and from where a large number of those present witnessed the finish, Golden Play appeared to be the winner.

By Surprise Scores.

By Surprise, a trim daughter of By Himself, scored a half-length victory in the opener which drew a field of eight juveniles. Disruption, a long shot, was second in front of Polydee. The winner, the favorite, followed the pacesetter to the final swing and was drawing away at the finish. Silvery Cloud and Canobie Lake battled for the lead followed by By Surprise, but the top two faded out of the picture after four furlongs.

Miss Trooper gave the longest-hat players their first chance to shout when she took a close decision from Foxie in the second race. Once again a limit field competed. Hurdy Gurdy was installed the public choice but failed to figure in the running. Viva Pete came from far

Perry, Shields
Seeded First
In DrawNew Yorker Ranked Over Wood; Charest Heads in Veterans' Event.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (AP).—

Eighty-nine players were drawn today for the men's National singles tennis championship, beginning Saturday at Forest Hills, with Fred Perry, of England, the defending champion, seeded first among four foreigners, and Francis X. Shields, named at the head of a list of 11 seeded natives. First-round byes were given 30 entrants.

Shields and Perry were placed at the top and bottom, respectively, of the upper half of the draw, with plenty of stiff opposition between them and a prospective meeting in the semifinals on September 7.

Seeded in order behind Shields were Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex.; Sidney B. Wood, Jr., of New York; Berkeley Bell, of New York; Lester R. Stoen, of Los Angeles; Frankie Parker, of Lawrenceville, N. J.; Bryan Grant, of Atlanta; Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., and John W. Van Ryn, of Philadelphia.

Menzel Seeded No. 2.

Roderich Menzel, the giant Czechoslovakian, playing in the United States for the first time, was seeded at No. 2 on the foreign list, followed by Vernon G. Kirby of South Africa, and F. H. D. Wilde, of England.

Shields, Grant, Kirby and Bell received first round byes in the upper half. Allison and Stoen are the only seeded stars in the lower half drawn to play in the first round. Van Ryn, Wilde, Wood, Parker, Mangin and Menzel getting byes.

Allison, at the top of the lower half, meets Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C., while Stoen's opposition will be furnished by Lieut. James Farrin, of Edgewood, Md.

The placing of Shields at the top of the American entries came as somewhat of a surprise. It was generally figured that honor would fall to either Wood or Allison. Reports from the Davis Cup battlefield at Wimbledon indicated that Wood played more impressively in the singles than Shields, while Allison has been mopping up in the summer campaign in this country.

C. M. Charest, of Washington, the defending champion, was placed at the head of eight seeded players in the draw of 64 for the veterans' singles tournament which will be held in conjunction with the National.

Amazing Is Victor
In Detroit Feature

Detroit, Aug. 28 (AP).—Amazing, four-year-old gelding from the stable of Mrs. A. Wallin, rode up to his name today when he sped home a length and a quarter in front of Miss Careful to win the fifth race at the Detroit fair grounds track.

It was his second consecutive victory and many fans, expecting him to repeat, made him a favorite. He paid $7.20 for $2 in the mutuels. Le Bruyere, which led in the early stages, could do no better than third.

Jockey Frankie Mauro and Jack Chestnut engaged in a neck and neck contest for top riding honors of the day. Chestnut rode Wise Eddie and Commandman, while Mauro was astride Careful Kitty and Amazing.

Knight of Old Registers Easy Victory in Feature Sprint at Narragansett Park

As Favorite Is Second

Starogan Beaten by 2 1/2 Lengths; Panorama Is Poor Third.

DAWUCKET, R. I., Aug. 28 (AP).—Knight of Old, a 3-year-old son of Bright Knight, racing for C. T. Grayson, scored an easy victory over six other sprinters in the 5 1/4-furlong dash, which headed the Narragansett program today.

Ridden by the little-known jockey, C. Reid, the bay gelding took the lead soon after the start and stepped along in front to register by two and one-half lengths.

H. T. Archibald's Starogan, the favorite, was second, beating H. P. Headley's Panorama by four lengths.

Starogan, with W. Saunders up, forced the pace all the way, although never able to break the Knight of Old, while Panorama came from last place to take the short end of the purse from Mrs. W. T. Anderson's Cogay.

As second choice, Knight of Old paid $9.90 straight after running the distance in 1:06 3/5.

Saratoga Race Track, Aug. 28 (AP).—William Woodward's Vicar, a colt by Flying Ebony out of Valkyrie, and therefore bred to be in his glory in mud, was an easy winner of the Amsterdam, a claiming stakes which had its thirty-second running here today. The black 3-year-old jumped into instant command at the break and never was headed, beating Chalmers by a length and a half for the $1,845, which was the winner's portion of the purse.

Pompeius was a third tier, two lengths farther back, with Carry Over fourth and last.

Marlboro Race Track.

If Clocker Mike dug up any good things during that week's vacation I gave him at Cumberland, he must be hanging around the pool room casking in on them. I have been unable to locate him. Knowing Mike's weakness for those nickel claw machines, I visited almost every store in town that features one of those contraptions, but there was no word of Mike. I guess he is going in for some other kind of entertainment. In fact, I'm more interested in hearing his excuse for being absent than in having to feed him. There were two decisions here yesterday that were like ice cubes slid down your spinal column. Wishing Ring (a Benning's selection) was given a nose win over Golden Play, and Benish Way was given place money ahead of King of Hearts. I'm voting in favor of those who booted the decisions.

First race—Kharas has been a regular but has gotten little to date. Meets a field of failures and unknowns here and shapes up best of the lot. Uncle Billy did well in his lone try at Cumberland and may improve enough to be dangerous among them. Miss Symphony probably is best of the first-time starters.

Second race—Tuleyries Wand won two at Cumberland and followed with yesterday's smashing victory. Could make it four in a row if sent back. However, if she declines the issue, Easter Herald, a stablemate, should take the purse. Duffall was scratched yesterday and has a fighting chance here as has Clear Knight to show.

Third race—Mayznysia shapes up best in this test. Shows a nice winning effort at Cumberland and is fit and ready. Stylish Mack won up State and was knocked all over the course yesterday. Can improve that race. Whirly has a fighting chance to gain part of the award.

Fourth race—Dunora barely missed taking down chief money last week. Finds a field that suits here and should gain a set of brackets. King Bird raced at Cumberland and with that conditioner seems ready to crack down. Holland for the show.

Fifth race—Rustic Cuba likes this and won impressively at Cumberland. An intelligent ride today would get this one home. Benish Way folded yesterday but back to take third money. The winner supplied a $170.00 mutuel. Grace Hunting, which failed miserably on a trip to Rockingham, was on her toes yesterday and provided a second shock for the favorite players, who piled the cash in on Lady Buck. Ridden by the ducky Holland, Grace Hunting came with a rush in the stretch to defeat Bungalow and Lady Buck and pay a $27.10 mutuel. Lady Buck, odds-on in the betting, was poorly ridden, making several moves during the running of the five-and-a-half furlong race.

Lodorus Gets Home.

Jockey Gailther rode Lodorus to victory in the fourth race, coming from behind to take the measure of Nay Nay and Pergola. Lodorus was well played at a $9.10 mutuel, but Larissa was installed the favorite. Nay Nay closed fastest of all and would have won in a few more strides.

Another important change involved an Englishman, Gerald Balding, who is so well known in American play that his name is carried on the United States lists. He was raised from seven goals to eight. Balding is the sixth player to be rated at eight during the present season. The others, who were left at eight, are Eric Peden, Winston Guest, Jimmy Mills, Aidan Roark and H. W. Williams.

Will Rogers Advanced.

The second generation of the Millburns is moving ahead. Devereaux Millburn, jr., and his brother, John, were raised from one to two, as were Edward A. and Henry A. Gerry, twin youngsters who were raised from two to three in the Jan. 27 bridge T. Gerry, prominent con-

U.S. Army Polo Team Tied in Practice

War College in 13-13 Draw in Handicap Drill for Game With Mexicans.

THE United States Army polo team galloped through its second workout in preparation for the approaching international matches with Mexico in a spirited practice game with Army War College yesterday on the Potomac Park field. Aided by a seven-goal handicap, War College held the Army's finest to a 13-13 tie.

Improved mallet work, more solid and longer drives, were noticeable during the match in which the Army tried two combinations. The War College quartet also exhibited better form after its campaign at White Sulphur Springs, Va.

Defensive Play Raged.

Army's starting line-up found Lieut. Harry Starling at No. 1; Capt. C. E. Davis, No. 2; Lieut. George Reed, No. 3, and Maj. C. C. Smith back. This combination drove home seven goals, though its defensive play was a bit ragged in spots. War College scored four goals during the melee.

Capt. Davis moved up to No. 1 in the revised line-up, and Maj. Smith went to No. 2, with Lieut. Reed at No. 3, and Lieut. E. A. Walker holding down No. 4. This team rattled off six goals in the final half and checked War College's hard-riding team with two.

War College presented a line-up with Lieut. C. H. Reed, No. 1; Lieut. Gordon Rogers, No. 2; Lieut. Col. George T. Smith, No. 3, and Maj. Joseph Swing, No. 4.

Field of 2,000 Competes for Post Trophy in Playgrounds Title Meet Today

New Records Expected by Officials

Rosedale Seeking Sixth Successive Team Championship.

WE are interested in and like clean sport. We have been taught by our playground directors that we must accept the decisions of the judges, congratulate our conquerors and be gracious in victory. Our word is pledged that it shall be so.

Following the taking of this pledge will be the start of the annual track and field championships of the Municipal Department of Playgrounds at Central Stadium this morning for The Washington Post Trophy. More than 2,000 boys from every part of the city will be ready, on behalf of the competitors, by Jack Kent of Rosedale Playground, himself an outstanding athlete.

Promptly at 10 o'clock the athletes and their directors will form for the opening feature of the day's activities, a monster parade, led by the band of the National Training School for Boys, after which there will be the mass formation for the ceremony of the oath.

Many Distinguished Guests.

Prominent among the many distinguished guests expected will be Commissioner Hazen Maj. Brown, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police, and Assistant Superintendent Edwards.

Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor of playgrounds, will be in charge of the meet, assisted by a staff of capable and experienced officials.

Because of the great interest shown in the unlimited unrestricted class, a new division this year, the events for this group should prove among the most spectacular of the day. Many of the national college "letter" men being expected to show their wares. The 1-mile race in this class will start at 12:30, followed by the half-mile for the "unlimited restricted" class at 12:45, the age limit in the latter group being 18.

New Records Looked For.

Sarron Treated for Injuries Caused by Foul

pitiously like a colicky baby to a rub-down table. The writer examined it again today—and it fitted perfectly into the bruise allegedly made when Bass' fists rammed it into the leg.

The writer saw the punch in question—and several other foul punches delivered by Bass because he had been forewarned to look for them—forewarned by one of the smartest judges of fighting ability in the world, Ray Alvis.

Predicts Sarron Walk-over.

"Sarron should walk away with this fight tonight," Alvis said just before the fight. "If he stays away from Bass for two rounds, he's a middle distance runner in question—and several other foul punches delivered by Bass because he had been forewarned to look for them—forewarned by one of the smartest judges of fighting ability in the world, Ray Alvis.

Bass' record is riddled with bouts lost on fouls. In the 17 fights he has lost, nine of them have been lost on fouls. In 1926 he almost ruined Pete Sarmiento in fouling out in six rounds. In 1928, he fouled out to Phil McGraw as the durable Greek was pinning his ears back in the fourth round. In 1929, Harry Leonard and Johnny Datto fell a victim and the next year he fouled out to Sammy Fuller and Tommy Cello. Jackie Pilkington, he fouled out in the seventh round in 1931 and Frank Bojorski won on a foul from him in 1932. Last year he pipped one below the belt on Davey Abad terminating a Texas fight in the second round.

In the five years he has been in the ring, Pete Sarron has never before won a fight on a foul.

Red Sox Defeat Cleveland, 8 to 2

Grove Limits Indians to Seven Hits; Series Ends Even.

BOSTON, Aug. 28 (AP).—Lefty Bob Grove pitched well in spite of a cold, misty rain which blew in from the Northwest throughout Cleveland's last game of the season here and the Red Sox scored an 8-to-2 victory today. The triumph gave the Red Sox an even break for the series, leaving them a game and half out of third place.

Grove limited the Indians to seven hits, four of which came in the third inning, granted only one walk and struck out three. His opponent, Ralph Winegarner, managed to escape the consequences of wildness and his teammate's errors until the sixth inning. Then the Red Sox uncorked a six-run blast and won the ball game.

Boston Bats Around.

The score was tied at 2-2 going into the sixth. Boston batted around as Lyn Lary opened with a double, beat Winegarner's throw on Grove's sacrifice and scored the first run on Bill Werber's single after Bishop had walked to all the bases. Knickerbocker muffed Cooke's pop fly, letting Grove score. Winegarner let fly a wild pitch, and Bishop counted. A walk loaded the bases again and Porter and Rick Perrell hit singles, scoring the fifth run and leaving the corners crammed.

Lary, up for the second time, drove in the final counter with a long fly after Morgan had hit a short one. Grove fanned to end the inning.

None Surprised.

Everybody else in the room except me had known Mickey for years. No one appeared to pay any special attention to him.

Mickey's tears stopped leaking down into his pie plate after a while. His little temper of nerves blew itself out and the talk went on.

"He's always been like that," whispered Bing Miller. "A bundle of nerves. I've seen him come into the room after the A's blew a hard one. He'd pull his hair and butt his head against the wall. He's keyed up to the snapping point. He wears his emotions in public. He can't help himself. He'd go crazy without these blow-offs."

Later I was talking to Cy Perkins. "Mickey's the damndest fellow you ever saw," Cy said. "He throws more tantrums than a woman. You heard those old stories about how Caesar wept. Well, this guy's weeping all the time. He weeps when we win and he weeps when we lose. He's the tightest, crinest, toughest, grandest guy I ever knew."

And, pals, that goes for this observer, too. Mickey Cochran is a man's man. He is personally dragging his Detroit Tigers along to a

Mickey the Weeper

By Jimmy Powers
(Pinch Hitting for Paul Gallico).

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 28 (AP).—I saw Mickey Cochran weep the other night. It was at a private party, strictly stag. Below in the obscure little Philadelphia dance hall under our back stairs room came the faint thump of a piano and the shuffle of feet. Some one began to review all the teams that had blown up in the home stretch and had lost the pennant. Mickey had been leaning over his supper plate, his big ears flopping, his chin out, his smoldering dark eyes staring. Suddenly he excused himself, got up and went out.

Bing Miller was there, his bald head shining like an old yellowed cue ball. So was Cy Perkins, another Athletic teammate of Cochran in earlier years. The two looked at each other and shrugged their shoulders. Pretty soon Mickey came back. His eyes were red and he was dabbing at them with a handkerchief. He was sniffing, too, and blowing his nose. Unless I had known he had not taken a drink I would have sworn he was stifling hicoughs. But there was no getting away from it. The man had been crying like a baby.

A Soul in Torment.

"O, that dirty so-and-so. O, that such-and-such. I've a mind to cut his blanket blank heart out." He kicked the tin waste basket and then slapped his forehead and moaned with the pain of a bruised toe. It was funny. You felt like laughing. But then you looked at his eyes and saw a soul in torment.

Patches of adhesive tape on his anatomy flapped as he walked, great crimson dabs of mercuriochrome stained his hide and purple welts on his thighs and forearms marked the point score of innumerable foul tips. But he was in far greater mental than physical agony.

He screamed that he would murder the wretch that very moment. He snatched up the phone and then a great change came over him. He lowered his voice. He hurried. Later the culprit heard, called and was greeted with a grin.

The Transformation.

"Where the hell you been all morning?" asked Mickey, ushering him to the best chair in the room. "Say, I've had the room full of newspapermen. They wanted a story about you. I told them you were the greatest fly hawk in the league. They were all steamed."

What out for a walk? Well, that's the way with you boys, you're too modest. Who? Me? Naw, I'm not kidding, you had a little tough luck yesterday. Forget it. And say, let's see you hustle to first base a little faster on those Charlie Paddock's of yours. Okay, kid, see you at the park."

The player had slouched in expecting a tongue-lashing. He swagged out. The next afternoon I watched him, and believe me, he played sensationally. Mickey doesn't let his nerves make his men nervous.

Browns Face Whitehill Today

St. Louis to Make Final Appearance; Fifth Place at Stake.

The Browns and their season here this afternoon, with ladies invited as the Nats' guests. It will mark the end of the campaign here with the exception of a Labor Day double-header with the Red Sox and three games with the Yankees on September 29-30, a double-header to be played on one of these dates.

Earl Whitehill, the pain in his stomach gone, is expected to do the native flinging, while another of the flock of ex-Nats with the Browns, Ed Wells or Dick Coffman, will toil on the hill for the aliens.

Undivided fifth-place honors, if any, are temporarily, at least, at stake in today's game.

You never can tell how injuries will respond to treatment. In Monday's game, Johnny Stone was hit solidly on his weak left ankle and also received a bad bruise on the other one, while Buddy Myer was slightly sprained on his left ankle yesterday. Myer showed up with his while Myer showed up with his ankle badly swollen.

But, as the Indian said as he saved off a scalp, "what's grief to one is joy for another," and Johnny Kerr benefited from Buddy's misfortune. He drew the second-base assignment his first of the season as a Nat starter. Kerr was removed for a pinch-hitter in the seventh, however, and Myer had to finish the game.

Bobby Burke did not walk a man until the sixth. Then he passed Strange intentionally to bring Newsum up with two on and two out. At that, Bobby had to make quite a play to get his mound rival out at first. He knocked down a hard roller, chased the ball back toward second, and followed through with a hard underhand toss to nip the runner by a whisker.

Catcher Redman Bought by Griffith

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Baseball Club, last night announced the purchase of Don Redman, a catcher, from the Birmingham Southern Association.

Redman, a 20-year old youngster serving his first full season in organized baseball, will not report to the Griffiths until spring training next year. Griffith explained that he is still in the development stage and was not purchased with the idea of retaining him on the roster. The lad will be farmed out for future reference.

Redman tips the beams at 180 pounds and hovers around six feet in height. He batted only 214 with the Barrons this season, though he has played in only half their games. Scout Joe Engle discovered him.

Nurmi Refused Reinstatement

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 28 (AP).—Paavo Nurmi, the greatest middle distance runner the athletic world has ever seen, today was disbarred from further athletic competition as an amateur when the International Amateur Athletic Federation Congress voted down a proposition which would have restored him to good standing.

Nurmi still can compete in his home country, Finland, where he was cleared of charges of accepting moneys beyond his actual expenses on a European tour, but he is barred from international competition, which includes the Olympic games.

The vote was 12 to 5 with many delegates refraining from voting. Nurmi has been suspended since 1932.

Stocks Shrink Four-Tenths in Dull Trading

Speculative Spirit Weakens as Sales Decline to 404,220 Shares.

New York, Aug. 28 (P)—Back in the summer doldrums, the stock market drifted a trifle lower today. It was one of the duller sessions of the year. Turnover was only 404,220 shares, compared with 534,200 yesterday.

The approach of Labor Day and talk of a seasonal upturn in business over the next few weeks failed to whet the speculative appetite for equities.

In all financial markets, a vacation mood was prevalent. Movements were narrow and trading quiet for the most part in commodities and bonds as well as in stocks.

U. S. Financing Program. Wall Street waited for the scheduled release of Secretary Morgenthau in connection with forthcoming Treasury financing in hope that he would shed more light upon the Nation's monetary policies.

In foreign exchange dealings, the dollar eased off a little following its rally the past few days, but there was no revival of inflation talk.

Stocks Drop Fraction. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks receded 7.11 off four-tenths of a point, as the market gave up some more of the ground it won on last week's upturn.

American Can. U. S. Steel, General Electric, General Motors, American Telephone & Telegraph, J. I. Case, Montgomery Ward, Standard Oil of New Jersey and other leading trading mediums were unchanged or showed only small fractional changes at the close.

Steel shares did not respond perceptibly to the Republic-Corliss-McKinney merger news. It had been under discussion for some time. Liquor shares encountered some demand on talk of improvement in that industry. American Commercial, National Distillers and Schenley got up fractions to about a point.

There was scattered liquidation in some chemical shares, partly influenced by belief that if the threatened textile strike materializes it might influence demand for chemicals. Allied Chemical lost 2 points. DuPont, on the other hand, was a firm spot.

Rails eased further as the financial district studied implications of the railroad's report for higher freight rates. Evidence of a seasonal upturn in loadings was still lacking in individual reports of carriers. A little selling dribbled into textile shares.

While the hog market pursued its big advance, touching a top of $7.00 a hundredweight, commodities generally suffered from the same speculative inertia that was manifest in the share market. Wheat ended fractionally lower but corn was firm. A decline of 40 to 65 cents a bushel augmented previous losses in cotton.

A few signs of commercial credit expansion cheered observers who have rested prophecies of business expansion and a rising stock market upon the potentialities for credit-inflation existing in the present banking situation. Recent increase in bank loans, however, were considered too restricted to be indicative of a broad trend.

Additional rains in farm areas tempered pessimistic forecasts of the possible effects of the Western drought upon fall business.

Robey's Review

Richberg's First Report on Accomplishments of the New Deal Sets a High Standard for the Later Installments.

By Ralph West Robey.

Mr. Donald Richberg's first report on the accomplishments of the New Deal provides an interesting analysis of the developments in the field it covers during the last 10 months. It is worth study. Of course it does not contain any recognition of unfavorable factors. Neither does it admit, even by implication, that we might have had any recovery without the New Deal. These omissions, however, are easily explained by the nature of the report. It is a report on the accomplishments of the New Deal. It is not a report on the failures of the New Deal.

Most interesting of the points stressed by the report are the figures on unemployment. In June of this year there were, it is stated, 40,180,000 persons employed in the United States. This was an increase of 4,120,000 over the low point of March, 1933, and 2,320,000 over June, 1932. The increase in employment between March and June of last year, in other words, was 1,800,000; the increase in the following year about one-third greater.

Reflects a Decline of Over 30 Per Cent in Unemployment. Unquestionably this is a good showing. It reflects a decline in the volume of unemployment of, say, between 30 and 35 per cent. Any administration that is responsible for such an accomplishment within a space of 18 months is deserving of praise.

There are, nevertheless, two points in connection with the figures that can not be over-emphasized. These are the questions of the source of the employment and the steadiness of the growth. For it is one thing to bring about a situation in which men may be put to work, and quite another thing to bring about a situation in which men may be put to work and the work may be permanent.

Unfortunately, Mr. Richberg throws almost no light on either of these questions. All he says is that the "increase of 1,800,000" was "the result of the New Deal." This is a very general statement. It does not tell us what the New Deal did to bring about this increase. It does not tell us whether the increase was the result of the New Deal or whether it was the result of other factors.

Bond Market Curb Displays Turbulence in Slow Sales

Some Steel Company Issues Are Active; Trading Falls to $8,214,000.

New York, Aug. 28 (P)—Irregularities developed in today's quiet bond market and the list, as a whole, was a bit easier at the close of trading.

Transfers totaled $8,214,000, par value, against $9,897,000 yesterday, and the Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 domestic corporate bonds was off one-tenth of a point at 104.4.

Activity in some of the steel company bonds followed announcement of completion of negotiations for a merger of the Republic Iron & Steel Corporation with the Corliss-McKinney Co. The best advance of the day was recorded by Republic 5 1/2s, which, at 97 1/2, showed a net gain of 7 1/2 points. The consolidation plan calls for the retirement of this issue out of the proceeds of a new offering of convertibles.

List of Gainers. In addition to Republic 5 1/2s, the same company's 5s were up 1/4 point at 103 1/2. # Wheat Values Again Sink; Corn Rallies

Fluctuations Are Colorful as Winnipeg and Liverpool Also Decline.

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP)—Slipping wheat values gave a tone of weakness to the entire grain market today, the one exception being a comparatively sensational closing spurt of buying that lifted corn prices to a fractional net gain for the day.

The otherwise lethargic market was a drab affair that to a great extent reflected a general weakness at all leading world markets and an apparent hesitancy of traders here.

Colorful fluctuations of blackboard figures were the result of comparatively light business.

Corn Shows Gain.

Wheat prices lost 1/4 to 1/2 cent a bushel, but corn showed gains ranging from 1/4 to 3/4 cent. Buying by professional leaders and some outside support reversed a sharp downward trend in corn and a sharp rise of more than a cent from bottom figures was witnessed shortly before the close.

Lower wheat prices at Winnipeg and Liverpool had a depressing effect here. The Canadian market again was called upon to absorb heavy hedging sales consequent to the movement of the Dominion's crop and this was reflected both here and abroad.

Wheat marketings in Canada yesterday aggregated 3,300,000 bushels, the heaviest movement of the season thus far.

September wheat closed here at 1.01 1/2, only a fraction better than the mid-August price. May, however, finished at 1.04 1/2, representing about a 10-cent advance since August 15. September options of corn ended at 77 1/2 to 78 cents, almost 8 cents higher than a fortnight ago.

May Deliveries Closed at 82 1/2

Rallies Fractionally.

Wheat rallied fractionally from the early lows that represented losses of a cent from yesterday following receipt of a private report that frost damage to wheat in northern Alberta indicated a yield loss placed at 10 to 15 per cent. Routine weather news was largely ignored, however, although failure of predicted frost in the Dakotas and Minnesota to materialize was credited with causing some selling.

A forecast for generally clear but possibly cooler weather over the grain belt, with an indication of light frost in low sections of Wisconsin, attracted little attention.

A feature in the market was sales for Minneapolis and Winnipeg accounts ascribed by pit observers to hedging operations. Northwest mills were said to have sold May deliveries against purchases of cash wheat. The late rally in corn caused some short covering.

Oats closed unchanged at 14 down, the loss 1/4 to 3/4 cent barley was unchanged to 14 1/2.

Soaring hog values gave strength to the provisions market and also were reflected to some extent in the corn and oats pits.

Provisions Price Range.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Gump came down the road, and clumped at man's elbow, and he arose in sackcloth clothes, and figured what he owed. For years, with coin supplied, he traveled high and wide; if coin ran out he was a scout whose credit was his pride. In every store in town he had a fair renown; he'd buy a suit or hat or boot, and say, "Just chalk it down." Then most men went in debt; they'd buy a wireless set, a keg of nails, some toast on quails, a dachshund for a pet. The woman had her furs, and gorgeous terms were hers; she spent bawbees for Pekinese and other costly curs. Men went in debt for beans and guns and limousines, and women blew the kopecks, too, like duchesses or queens. The merchant princes prayed to have the people's swear if they were ever paid. It was an orgy wet, a carnival of debt, and its effects, as one expects, are clinging to yet. A million men have said, while crawling into bed, "The world we'd face with smiling grace if all our debts were dead. If we had paid our bills, when coin was in our tills, we now might know far less of woe, and more ecstatic thrills." How fortunate the gent, on useful errands bent, who still can say, from day to day, "I do not owe a cent. Depression came along and jabbed me with its prong, but no man said I owed a red, and so I chirped my song. I walk the village street and never do I meet reproachful jays with bitter gaze, who say I am a beat." How saddened is the skate who sees around his gate the Jacks and Jills with long due bills, and asks if they won't wait.
